Washington Looks For A New Coolidge

President in His Own Right, Not by Whimsical Fate, He Will Have Free Hand in Dealing With All Matters, Unfettered by Action of Any Predecessor.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Nov. 6.—In the wake of an election which has brought about a new alignment in the reigning Republican party, and put Calvin Coolidge in the White House for four years by overwhelming popular mandate, there followed today a train of discussion not alone among the president's friends but among his opponents as well as to the course of action that will mark his policies in the more or less difficult months ahead.

Politics, so far as Mr. Coolidge is concerned, now can be put on the shelf for a long time. He need make no appointments to office, nor take any executive action, as presidents sometimes must, with an eye to the effect it will have on his party's political fortunes.

He is now president in his own right and president no longer by the hands of a whimsical fate that removed his predecessor from office. In a similar situation, in 1904, Theodore Roosevelt is said to have remarked to Mrs. Roosevelt, "Madam, your husband is no longer a political accident." And to some friends he is reported to have said "Now watch me."

There followed some sanguinary battles between T. R. and the Senate Old Guard.

Same Congress For Three Months.

Extreme rectitude has thus far marked Mr. Coolidge's demeanor toward Congress. He has, during his year and a half, attempted no "big stick" methods. He "pushed" the Mellon plan, he vetoed the bonus and the postal pay increase bill, but in so doing he did "fight" Congress in the sense that Roosevelt did. For the next three months the president will have to deal with the same recalcitrant Congress that has fought him and administration policies generally throughout his tenure of office. Moreover it is now a "lame duck" congress, and probably more recalcitrant still.

Little can be expected of it except the passage of the usual appropriation bills before it dies naturally the fourth of March next.

The New Congress.

The new Congress, elected Tuesday, is somewhat better, but it is a question whether it will be more amenable to White House discipline than the outgoing one. While the Republicans appear to have made substantial gains, Mr. Coolidge will still have to face narrow working majorities in both houses. And in the senate particularly it is a question whether the margin of control will not still be vested in a combination of Democrats and those of his own political faith who do not agree with many of his policies—LaFollette, Frazier, Ladd, Norris and others who on occasion vote with them.

It may be that the senate will be more in awe of Mr. Coolidge, in the face of the popular endorsement Mr. Coolidge received at the polls on Tuesday and the severe lacing administered to some of his forces. Again it may not.

Considering a New Coolidge.

Confronted with this situation, the questions being asked around Capitol Hill today were:

Will there be a new Coolidge, a militant, forceful, dominating, aggressive Coolidge who will drop the mantle of reserve that necessity forced on him when he became a dead president's constitutional heir? Will he bludgeon congress into doing his bidding? Will he, now that he is president in his own right, force action on the World Court in an unwilling Senate, the unwilling ones being in his own party? Will he again attempt to jam through the Mellon plan, lowering taxes on huge incomes, in the face of Democratic and Progressive opposition?

All these and many similar questions will be answered in the months immediately ahead of Calvin Coolidge, president no longer by a stroke of fate, but by one of the most impressive popular triumphs in the history of American politics.

Cabinet Changes.

It is expected that the cabinet, part of which Mr. Coolidge inherited and part of which he appointed, will continue in office. He has at the outset one vacancy to fill, in the department of agriculture, due to the death of Henry C. Wallace.

It is said the president is endeavoring to obtain for the post ex-Governor Frank C. Lowden of Illinois, who, had he consented to it, would have been the next vice-president. He was nominated at Cleveland and then turned it down. Lowden has been offered and refused more government jobs than any man extant. Harding offered him three cabinet posts and his choice of a diplomatic appointment, all of which were rejected.

Lowden's friends say that he still does not want any job but that his interest in agriculture might lead him to accept it. Agriculture is his hobby and chief avocation. The acquisition of the ex-governor would bring into the Coolidge cabinet an outstanding figure in public life, as well as one of the foremost agricultural authorities of the country.

Hughes May Stay.

It is considered certain that Charles E. Hughes will remain as secretary of state. He was Coolidge's chief spokesman during the campaign.

Mellon to Remain.

It is likewise considered certain that Andrew W. Mellon will remain as secretary of the treasury.

It was learned officially at the treasury department today that Secretary Mellon would remain in the cabinet.

Two other members of the cabinet, Attorney General Stone and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, are Mr. Coolidge's own appointees and are expected to stay.

Concerning the balance of the official family there is some doubt. There has been reports that Secretary of War Weeks and Secretary of Commerce Hoover are anxious to retire, the former on account of advancing age, the latter for private business reasons.

This leaves Postmaster General Harry S. New, Secretary of the Interior Work, and Secretary of Labor Davis, all members of the Harding cabinet. Their future is said to be uncertain.

Successor for Slemp.

One of the early changes President Coolidge is expected to make is in his private secretary, C. Bascom Slemp, who now that the campaign is over, is said to be anxious to get out. There has been constant friction between Slemp and William M. Butler, generalissimo of the Coolidge campaign.

There is also keen interest in the capital as to what reward Butler will receive for promoting one of the most successful campaigns in Republican history. The expectation prevails that a cabinet post will be made available to him before many weeks.

Roosevelt carried a number of upstate cities won by Smith in the election two years ago including Syracuse, Buffalo, Rochester, Poughkeepsie, Rome, Binghamton and Amsterdam.

The Roosevelt vote in New York city was slightly more than 400,000. He failed to carry a single assembly district in the city.

In addition to the five counties within New York city, Governor Smith won Albany, former Republican stronghold, Clinton, another Republican county, and Hamilton, the county with the smallest vote in the state. Smith also carried the following upstate cities: Albany, Schenectady, Troy, Utica, Oswego, Elmira, Rensselaer and Plattsburg.

Governor Smith also carried Glens Falls—by five votes.

Asks Transfer Of Schiff Line

Former Senator Charles W. Walton sent a communication to the common council Wednesday evening asking the council to consent to the transfer of the consent given to Charles A. Schipp to operate a bus line between High Falls and this city, to the Schipp Auto Bus Line Company, Inc. A resolution to that effect was offered by Alderman Deichert and the matter was referred to the bus committee and corporation counsel.

After auditing some bills the council adjourned to Monday morning, November 10, at which time the council will meet as a board of canvassers to canvass the city vote at the recent election.

All of the aldermen were present at Wednesday's session with the exception of Aldermen Joy and Flannery. It was stated that Alderman Flannery, who is a World War veteran, had returned to a government hospital for treatment.

Zoning Maps To Be Exhibited

Mayor Morris Block called the attention of the common council Wednesday night to the fact that in the proposed zoning ordinance the residential, factory and business districts were not set forth, although they were shown on the map of the city that had been prepared, and he suggested that the map be displayed in various sections of the city so that all residents could obtain an idea as to where the residential section, the business section and the factory section would be located in the city.

The mayor's suggestion was unanimously approved and Alderman Everett offered a resolution that the city engineer prepare four maps to be displayed in four different sections of the city, which was unanimously adopted.

LINDERMAN AVENUE FIRE.

House Destroyed, Barn Damaged, Through Lack of Water.

Fire Wednesday evening destroyed the residence on the what was formerly the Robert Henry Hodge farm on Linderman avenue in the town of Ulster. The farm was sold in May of this year to Jacob and Anna Ford of Houston, Texas, who took possession. The barn caught fire and was damaged.

As the only place to get water was from a well, the efforts of neighbors to put out the fire were unsuccessful. An alarm of fire was sent in from Box 34, Wilbur avenue and Abeel street, far distant from the fire, and a still alarm sent in to Wiltwyck Hose Company station on Fair street, stating the fire was on Linderman avenue. The firemen who went to the scene could not use their apparatus. Mrs. Ford burned her hands trying to save a dog in the house, the canine losing its life. The flames lighted the sky and could be seen in many parts of the city.

Will Recommend Tax Reduction

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Nov. 6.—Reduction of the surtax on big incomes to 25 per cent will be recommended to congress next month by President Coolidge, it was learned officially at the treasury department today.

This was one of the features of the original Mellon tax plan which congress turned down last winter.

Fight Starts for Speakership

Miss Davitt Gets Thief in the Act

At 1 o'clock this afternoon, Miss Marge Davitt, who is employed at the Saddlemire Co., local brokers at 276 Fair street, was startled to see a well dressed young man running out of the office. Upon discovering that her purse was missing, which contained a large amount, which she was soon to deposit, she hurried after the thief and compelled him to hand her purse over. The thief put up a hardluck story and handed over the purse and made his getaway.

Control of House In Republicans

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Nov .6.—The new house of representatives for the 69th congress, according to latest unofficial returns, will be made up as follows:

Republicans, 245; Democrats, 186; Farmer-Labor, 2; Socialists, 2; total, 435.

Returns from Colorado, Montana, New Mexico and Washington are not complete and there are conflicts in reports received from scattered districts throughout the country where the vote is close. The Republicans hope to increase their total to 250 votes, reducing the Democratic apparent total to 181.

President Coolidge is assured of legislative control of the house as it now stands. The LaFollette managers will be unable by coalition with the Democrats to outvote the regular Republicans.

Adding the LaFollette, Socialist and Farmer-Labor vote to the Democratic strength of 186, the Republicans face a total opposition of 206, leaving the Republicans with a working majority of 23.

Republicans Gain Six at Albany

Revised Returns Give Dominant Party Four More Seats in Senate And Six in Assembly—Legislation May Be Held Up.

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Complete figures today showed that the Republicans gained four seats in the Senate and six in the Assembly in Tuesday's election.

There will be 29 Republicans and 22 Democrats in 1925 Senate. The Democrats controlled the senate for the last two years by a majority of one.

The 1925 Assembly will be composed of 93 Republicans and 57 Democrats. There were 87 Republicans and 63 Democrats in the 1924 house.

With Governor Al Smith in the Executive Chamber and the Republicans in firm control of the law-making branches of the government, it was declared at the capitol today that there was little chance that much important legislation would be enacted for the next two years.

Not one bill which the lawmakers pass can become a law unless approved by the governor. On the other hand, the Legislature if the Republican leaders decree will be in a position to defeat all of the important measures recommended by the governor.

Two of the four gains made by the Republicans in the senate were in Greater New York where Courtlandt Nicoll, Republican, defeated Senator Meyer Levy in the seventeenth district and Former Senator John Karle, Republican defeated Senator Frank Giorgio in the second district.

In Rensselaer county the Republicans gained a third senate seat when John F. Williams defeated the Democratic candidate, Colonel Ransom H. Gillett. A few years ago Colonel Gillett was a Republican member of the Assembly from Columbia. Later he moved to Troy and there joined the Democratic party.

The fourth seat was gained in Buffalo where Leonard R. Lipowitz defeated Senator Robert C. Lacey, Democrat.

The Republican gains in the Assembly were made in Albany, Rensselaer, Sullivan and West Chester counties and in Greater New York.

Senator Lodge in Death's Shadow

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 6.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, senior Massachusetts senator, was in the shadow of death at the Charlesgate hospital today. The senator recently underwent two operations for obstruction of the bladder from which he was said to be recovering. A shock is responsible for the gravity of his present condition. He is unconscious.

Doctors Frederick Winslow and John W. Cunningham issued a statement at noon declaring "Senator Lodge's condition remains unchanged, not hopeful."

Senator Lodge was operated on for gallstones at Charlesgate hospital on July 27. He was operated on a second time October 20 with the intention of preventing any recurrence of the conditions which led to the first operation.

Big Attendance at Y.W.C.A. Supper

The Y. M. C. A. weekly supper was held at the association Wednesday evening and was well attended. The speaker was Mrs. DeHertogh who in a most interesting way told about the work of the State Travelers' Aid, of which organization she is the agent for Ulster county.

Miss Alma Tyler presided at the supper and made several announcements of interest to the girls. She stated that the speaker for next week would be Mrs. Carey of Poughkeepsie, who has lived abroad for many years and who has a very worthwhile message to bring. Upon vote of those present it was decided to have a baked bean supper. All reservations for next week should be made not later than next Tuesday noon and it is hoped that a record crowd will be present to greet Mrs. Carey.

Miss Weber, whose eyes were blackened and face bruised by her assailant, is slowly improving and expects to be able to appear in court against Alverson next week when the case comes up for a hearing.

Two Coast Patrol Boats Soon To Be Launched Here

Construction of Two Coast Patrol Boats for Government Nears Completion at Island Dock Yard—Contract for Ten Boats Awarded Kingston Dry Dock Company.

Two of the new coast patrol boats for the United States Navy will shortly be launched at the yard of the Kingston Dry Dock & Construction Company on the Island Dock in the Rondout creek. Eight more of the same type of boats will be built at the yard for the government.

These new vessels are 75 feet long, 13 feet 8 inches in width and 9 feet deep. They draw about four four feet of water, and will have a speed of 25 miles an hour. Each vessel is equipped with the latest type of gasoline engine furnishing 400 horse power. There are two engines of 200 horse power in each boat.

The government earlier in the year decided to take steps to check the smuggling of liquor into this country from foreign shores and as a result a contract was awarded for the construction of these vessels which will be used to chase rum runners. The Island Dock shipyard was awarded a contract for the construction of ten of the proposed new craft.

When the boats are launched from the ways at the Island Dock they will be complete in every way. The boats are not only built here but the machinery is also installed, and when launched they will be ready to proceed to New York under their own power, there to be turned over to the navy department.

The two vessels that are practically completed are a fine type of the shipbuilding art, and reflect great credit on the skill of the men who fashioned them at the Island Dock.

Boy Scouts on Traffic Duty

Plan of Cooperation Between Police Department, Teachers of City Schools and Boy Scouts to Protect Children at Schools to Be Made Permanent.

The following letter written by J. Allan Wood, chief of police, has been received at the Ulster County Boy Scout Headquarters:

G. Henry Nesslage, Scout Executive.

Dear Sir:

Last year the police department of Kingston entered a plan of cooperation with teachers of the city schools and the Boy Scout organization to furnish protection at the various schools of the city for children. It is desired to carry this plan into effect permanently.

The following rules and regulations describe the plan in detail. I sincerely hope that every scout will master these regulations, and under the guidance of the teachers and scout leaders, practice them faithfully.

(a) With the consent and approval of the principal of the school adjacent to the crossing to be guarded, troops enrolled in safety service will organize safety patrols. Their duties will be at street crossings, in vicinity of school buildings, at school dismissal time and also, where conditions warrant, just before school opens.

Following is suggested as an efficient plan.

At each crossing selected for special protection two scouts will take position.

Scout No. 1 will place himself on curb at crossing. As children arrive they will be arranged in line, two abreast, Scout No. 2 assisting in this formation. When sufficient number of children are lined, Scout No. 1, upon signal from the traffic officer, or if there be no traffic officer, when he himself considers the crossing safe, will conduct group of ten or twenty children across street. Scout No. 2 meanwhile will march at rear of squad until it arrives at place on opposite curb. Scout No. 1 and 2 will then return and take up the formation of the next group. Continue the operation until all the children are safely across the street.

Additional scouts may be used at crossings to aid in forming the group. The same scheme may be used at points further away from the school if desired.

(b) Scouts on safety patrol duty and at such other times as may be practicable will orally caution other boys and girls to observe the following rule.

"When crossing the street, cross only at regular crossings, go straight across, but look first to the left, then to the right, for approaching vehicles, and allow safe distance when crossing ahead of traffic. Watch and obey the scout or traffic officer if either are on duty at the place you wish to cross." All scouts should learn and observe this rule themselves for sake of their own personal safety, and should assist police further to prevent accidents by asking their parents, relatives and others to observe this rule. Will you please cooperate with us in getting this movement well established and in operation in your school.

Very truly yours,

J. ALLAN WOOD,
Chief of Police.

Mystery in Ball Of Junior League

Dye Pot and Feverish Sewing Have Mysterious Part in Preparations for Decorating Armory for Thanksgiving Eve Oriental Ball.

The plans for the Junior League ball are progressing rapidly and though the date, November 26, seems fairly remote, the members of the Junior League are up to their eyebrows in work. Last year this organization gave one of the most successful balls ever given in Kingston, not only from a financial point of view (for the returns were gratifyingly large and have enabled the league to continue the admirable work of employing a baby welfare nurse on full time), but from a social outlook as well, the affair was an artistic triumph.

This year these young ladies are striving not only to equal, but to surpass last year's efforts. The decorations will be even more elaborate and interesting than last year and while the preparations are so far shrouded in mystery, it is betraying no secret to say that the Junior League has had recourse to the dye pot and that every afternoon they are sewing feverishly to bring to perfection the work that their amiable task master, the friend who has undertaken to plot out their decorative scheme, has laid out for them. The Oriental character of the ball gives scope for very interesting effects and these are bing carried out to the last degree—scenery, costumes, music, everything but food which will be of the good wholesome American description that made the refreshments stall so greatly popular last year. In fact every detail is receiving the minutest attention so that this year's ball may be as nearly perfect as possible.

Annual Meeting Of Farm Bureau

New York State Farm Bureau Federation in Annual Session at Syracuse—Joint Sessions With Home Bureau Federation.

J. W. Coverdale, secretary of the new twenty-six million dollar grain cooperative, will be the chief speaker at the opening session of the annual meeting of the New York State Farm Bureau Federation in Syracuse today. Mr. Coverdale will tell the New Yorkers how the western grain farmer is cooperating in the giant grain marketing organization.

Delegates from each county farm bureau association in New York state will be in Syracuse for the meeting, the ninth annual convention of the federation, according to Secretary E. V. Underwood. These delegates will represent about 30,000 farmers, members of the farm bureau, considered to be among the most progressive in the state.

The meeting will run for two days. Enos Lee of Yorktown Heights, N. Y., will preside. Other speakers will be Director C. E. Ladd, of the New York State College of Agriculture, and H. E. Babcock, general manager of the G. L. F. Exchange.

Officers for the coming year will be elected and delegates to the annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation in Chicago will be selected.

The federation, which is an educational organization chiefly designed for farmer self-help, has had active committees at work during the past year on marketing, transportation, legislation, reforestation and the eradication of tuberculosis. These committees will report progress and plans will be made for the program during the coming year. The federation maintains a regular department for helping farmers settle disputed matters of transportation and maintains a legislative representative to keep farmers in touch with measures of rural interest.

The fifth annual meeting of the New York State Home Bureau Federation is also in progress at Syracuse, where it opened yesterday. The home bureau will hold some joint sessions with the farm bureau.

Here's Graphic Story of Boudoir Tragedy

The room was in a state of fearful disorder. Cupboards had been opened and their contents scattered here and there in the utmost confusion, says London Answers. Dresses and coats had been torn from their hooks and lay in crumpled heaps on the floor. Everywhere chaos reigned.

At first sight the room appeared empty, but through the gloom in one far corner a figure was discernible—the figure of a woman.

There she crouched, despair writ large on her beautiful face, the light of agony in her eyes. Her long black hair streamed loose over her shoulders and her face was flushed. Her whole attitude was that of a woman driven to desperation, of one who had received some dreadful injury and knew not which way to turn.

At last anger got the better of her. She drew herself erect with a gesture of indignation. Stretching her arms out she cried aloud:

"I cannot stand any more! It is already too much! I was so proud of you, and you have repaid my pride with torture!

"You were the envy of all my friends and I gloried in their envy. Every glance that was cast at you filled me with an inward glow. But you are not what I thought you. What have you done? You have tortured me until I cried out in agony, and still for your beauty I love you."

She broke off, her breast rising and falling with the stress of her emotions. Her breath came in short, quick gasps. She rocked herself to and fro as she moaned in agony.

Suddenly there was a knock at the door.

"It is time!" said a voice from without.

The words seemed to spur the woman to action.

"Yes," she replied hysterically, "it is time. I have stood you in spite of everything. But now—now I will end it forever. I will cast you off!"

And with an imperious gesture she ripped the little dancing shoe from her foot and flung it from her.

It was lovely—but a size too small.

Views Women as Pictures

Some women came to my house to dinner the other day, and began abusing the men. They said: "Present company excepted," but I begged them to enjoy themselves, and include me. Every little while I said something to further provoke them, and they finally did their best.

"Ladies," I said, "you have no idea how ashamed I am of my sex."

I told them of a man I know, married three times, who solemnly declares he never in his life proposed marriage to any woman.

"I can easily believe the story," I added; "I never did."

I have heard it said of a great painting: "Don't get too close to it." In order to get the best out of a picture view it in the proper light, and from a distance; don't crowd up, and get so close a look that you realize the rough way in which it was made.

Same way with women (I said to them).

"I prefer to view them from a distance; never closer than four or five feet."

Exalted Courage

True courage is cool and calm. The bravest of men have the least of a brutal, bullying insolence; and in the very time of danger are found the most serene and free. Rage, we know, can make a coward forget himself and fight. But what is done in fury or anger can never be placed to the account of courage.

First Victor pianoforte solo record by Gabrilowitsch—new Victor artist

There is something new on Victor Records every week! Now it's a big dance hit, again it is an unusual achievement in the field of great music. This week, Gabrilowitsch, who so brilliantly played the piano with the Flonzaley Quartet in the Schumann Quintette records recently announced, makes his Victor debut on a solo record; a record that reflects in every way his great fame in the concert world and reproduces exactly his fine mastery of tone color. He joins a distinguished company of pianists who also make Victor Red Seal Records,—make them because they bring out fully the individual touch of each,—of Bauer, Cortot, De Pachmann, Novaes, Paderewski, Rachmaninoff, Samaroff! A list without equal!

This charming school dress is made up of soft black and red material, and should appeal to the young miss attending school.

Simplicity Important in Clothes for Women

Simplicity, as every woman who makes a study of fashion knows, is the fundamental of true chic, and that simplicity is not to be confused with uninteresting plainness is proved by the surprisingly large number of simple little frocks that have been designed.

The garconne modes of the season just past are to a certain extent reflected in the newer fashions, but subtly modified and disguised so that there is no possibility of mistaking one of the new models for a gown of last year's vintage.

Both one and two-piece models are shown and in the two-piece affairs there is a tendency to exploit the longer tunic. However, for those who find a shorter length more becoming there are a number of interesting models. Kasha is one of the best liked materials, especially in a shade of beige, while black with touches of red or bright blue is a favorite with college and business girls.

Navy blue kasha is chosen for a model which has a collar of white kasha bound with Chinese blue. A similar color combination trims the cuffs and forms bands around the skirt. The button-holes are bound with white.

At the moment the new shade of bois de rose (rosewood) is most conspicuously displayed and is chosen for tailored suits, for sports clothes and for evening frocks. It is a particularly becoming shade and quite distinctive.

Picturesque Gowns Are Featured by Designers

Some of the most picturesque gowns conceived in Paris ateliers are interesting because of their novelty in detail. They are built of a heavy crepe meteor and have an all-over scheme of decoration in figures—nosegays, sprays and other quaint designs cut from chintz and appliqued with an outline of gilt thread.

Other models illustrate this same idea with hand embroidery of different sorts—Russian, Czech, Bulgarian; all of the folk patterns in gay colors; and in more modern motifs in silk and beads, gilt, crystal or jeweled. Such embroidery is unlimited in variety and in costly detail.

Much of the elaborate dress trimming—the brilliant ornaments, bands and fringes that have been displayed in increasing assortment since the earliest days of the autumn season—have now a raison d'etre in the smartest evening gowns, when they are so combined as to give the effect of a heavily embellished gown without evidence of separate trimming.

Gowns of silver or gold tissue are softened with fur or ostrich in hem bands, and fringe is seen even on these, painting the lily in the most extravagant sense of the term.

Tailored Lingerie Is an Interesting Fashion

A very interesting fashion trend in lingerie is the introduction of tailored and semitailored garments despite the seemingly overwhelming popularity of fancifully trimmed sets and single pieces.

One of the most pleasing modes in tailored lingerie, says the Philadelphia Ledger, is the nightgown with tailored collar and sleeve caps cut in one with the body of the gown, that is a decidedly definite adaptation of the semitailored daytime frocks that were in vogue all summer.

Other examples of the tailored mode in lingerie are seen in silk bloomer and chemisette sets trimmed with bound edges done in contrasting color or with set-on sections and bands that are simply hemstitched.

INVEST SAFELY.

Inspection of the stock books of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad Company discloses that out of a total number of stockholders, 30,931 are men and 30,370 are women. The number of men interested in Santa Fe stock is only 560 greater than the number of women.

The facts stated are of interest from several points of view. In the first place, they indicate the larger individual interest which the modern woman has in business. A quarter of a century ago women acquired an interest in the stocks of corporations almost exclusively through inheritance or through the investment of inherited funds. The number of women stockholders was relatively small. But in these days women have attained an individual share in business activity and they have earnings in their own right which they are free to invest in their own way. Undoubtedly most of the Santa Fe stockholders of the gentler sex have made the investment from their own earnings and on their own judgment, guided in part by the advice of bankers who strive to keep them from putting their savings into wildcat stocks.

It is this feature of the stock ownership that furnishes another viewpoint of interest. The Santa Fe is recognized as a good property, well managed. The stock sells above par and pays a fair rate of interest on the investment. It holds out little prospect of large profits to a speculative investor, but a very safe assurance of a fair return and little chance of loss. There are thousands of concerns throughout the country that are seeking to sell stocks of no value, of little value, or of uncertain value, and these concerns make women their special prey because women, in general, have had little experience in business. It is gratifying to note any evidence that women are investing their savings in a safe line of securities, for women are least able to stand the losses so frequently suffered by those who invest in wildcat enterprises.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has received widespread and hearty commendation for the great work he has done in managing the Nation's finances, but it may well be doubted whether his service in that respect is of as great value to the people of the Nation as his work in warning people with small savings against investments of a doubtful character. Men of wealth are quite often the victims of the smooth-tongued salesman, but they can stand the loss. They need no warnings from a Secretary of the Treasury or anybody else. But the losses sustained by people of small means have a double significance. Those losses not only fall upon people who are not able to stand them, but they discourage any effort at future savings.

It is to be hoped that all citizens, whether men or women, old or young, and particularly the young, will adopt a policy of putting a part of their earnings each year into safe securities which will bring a reasonable return.

It is fortunate that a political campaign comes but once in four years. Although most people go about their private business pretty much as usual during a campaign, yet many must, and should devote a lot of time to the discussion of the issues and the exhortation of voters not to neglect their duties as citizens. Then, too, many lines of business adopt a waiting attitude during a campaign. This is, however, an unavoidable incident of popular government, and, with all its disadvantages, popular government is better than any other kind with which the world has had experience.

The death of another woman who was a voluminous producer of fiction in her time calls to mind a large number of women who, during the last half century and more, were industrious producers of novels that were not of the first class but gained a host of readers. Mary J. Holmes, Mrs. Southworth, Augusta J. Evans, Amelia E. Barr, Charlotte M. Braeme, Mrs. Hungerford, Mrs. Forrester, Bertha M. Clay, "The Duchess," Marie Correlli—the list is long. Most of these were above the level of Laura Jean Libbey, but they all wrote in a somewhat similar Victorian manner and were at least highly moral in tone even if less distinguished in the matter of art and style than the successful women writers of today.

That Body of Yours

THE SERGEANT COOK.

During the war I got acquainted with the sergeant in charge of the food supplies and cooking of a very large military hospital.

He secured his supplies from the army service corps, and they were of the same quantity per man, and quality as the other hospitals.

But there was a rumor abroad that he secured more and better supplies, because men and patients of one institution will talk to men and patients of a similar institution.

Now, as a matter of fact, as I said above, his supplies were identically the same.

Why the difference?

Because he actually looked upon his work as an art, and himself as an artist.

He arranged his meals a full week ahead varying the menu in every conceivable way, and endeavoring to take into account the season of the year.

In addition to this he would fix up the same kind of food three or four different ways, so that the patients were being continuously tempted to eat the regular hospital meals, and were out of hospital sooner, and the "help" sat down and ate their "rations" without the sign of a kick.

Now there is no question but that our dietitians have taught us a great deal about food. They have figured out well balanced menus and the number of calories per day of each of the food stuffs, along with the necessary vitamins to ensure the all round diet necessary to health. This to them is their art, their profession and they are deservedly proud of their accomplishments.

But as I think of my friend, the sergeant cook, and remember that he took what was supplied him, prepared meals that were a delight to the eye, and enticed sick people to eat, I can't help but think that his "art" is just as important as that of the dietitian.

Because the big factor underneath all this is, that if you can make the hunger juices—in mouth and stomach—flow, by the appearance and tastiness of the food, you have gone a long way in getting people well.

Variety of food, and attractiveness in serving, means that you get the full value of the food.

Left Them Gasping

When Blanche Sweet was in England in connection with the production of "Tess of the d'Urbervilles," she met by chance, one day in London, a woman friend of long acquaintance, from home. The friend was a staunch teetotaller and an ardent advocate of prohibition for all and sundry. Judge then of her disgust when her prize Poke darted through the swing doors of a "pub" she was passing and disappeared from view.

Both women called and coaxed, but doggie would not respond. For either of them to venture inside was, of course, unthinkable, and, eventually, Miss Sweet's friend appealed to a passerby, obviously, a laborer.

"Would you kindly fetch my little dog out of that public-house, please!"

"Suttingly, lady, suttingly; er—which bar was you in?"—San Francisco Argonaut.

Spreading the Scriptures

If the present rate of distribution of the Bible is maintained the whole world may be supplied before the end of the century, says the New York Times. A high-water mark was reached last year, according to recent reports, when 30,000,000 copies of the Scriptures found their way into parts of all lands.

Of last year's total about one-fourth was the output of the American Bible society, an organization that since its birth 108 years ago has issued almost 100,000,000 volumes of Scriptures. For the second time in its history the society last year exceeded the 7,000,000-copy mark, an increase of 2,500,000 over the previous year.

TWENTY AND TEN YEARS AGO.

POULTRY

PREVENT SPREAD OF DISEASE OF CHICKS

The method of spread or transmission of white diarrhea is well known. That method is this: Chicks that survive the white diarrhea, contain the organisms in their bodies and a certain percentage of the eggs laid by that hen when grown are infected before hatching. The chicks come out of the shell with the disease and immediately show symptoms of white diarrhea and this spreads through their first four days of life to all the other chicks in the flock. During the first four days of life, if one chick comes out of the batch infected, others of that particular batch will become infected.

Prevention consists in hatching chicks from eggs free from infection. If your chicks get the disease, treatment is practically useless. Attention would be better given to prevention than to treatment. Kill all noticeably diseased. Remove all free from disease away from infected premises.

The only satisfactory method of determining whether a hen is infected is by means of blood test. Draw a small vial of blood from each hen that is to be bred from. The college is testing blood free of charge at the present time and will soon have a bulletin available explaining this method.

The proper time to test for white diarrhea is in the fall after culling. Test all hens you propose to keep over for breeding purposes. One test may not eliminate all disease. Test at least every year, or every six months, until you know they are free. Do not add to your flock any bird you do not know to be free from this disease.

All may soon be forced to test as people are going to stop buying indiscriminately from hatcheries or breeders whose eggs come from unknown, untested stock. They will buy from the hatchery that tests the hens that lay the eggs. The blood test is the only mean at all satisfactory for the elimination of white diarrhea, as it eliminates the hen that lays the eggs that are infected.—Dr. H. E. Newsom, Pathologist, Colorado Experiment Station.

Convenient Nests Easy to Keep in Good Order

Good nests are easy to clean and easy to get at when collecting eggs. They are most convenient to reach when located under the dropping boards or on the side walls. Unless the dropping boards are at least four feet from the floor, the nests should not be under them.

There should be one nest for every four birds in the pen. A box 12 by 12 inches is the most suitable size for the average bird. A 1 by 4-inch piece placed about four inches in front of the nests will give the hen a place to step from into the nest. By hinging this strip it can be used to close the nests against pullets in the fall and the broody hens in the spring.

The New Jersey experiment station ranks nesting materials in the following order: hay, shavings, sawdust and straw. To make cleaning easy, they suggest building nests in sections 12 by 12 by 16 inches, with a strip in front of 1 by 4-inch material to hold in the nest filler and a similar strip for the back of the nests. This sets on a platform the width of the nests and as long as the row of nests is to be. The nests are covered with a top of matched lumber which answers for the platform for the second tier of nests. When it is desired to clean the nests, they are simply pulled off the platform and all the nest material falls to the floor. These nests can be used either under the dropping boards or on the side walls.

Meat in Growing Mash

Do not feed over 10 per cent meat in the growing mash, as a high protein ration will mature the pullet instead of developing growth. Thirty-five pounds of cornmeal, 25 pounds bran, 25 pounds middlings, 10 pounds meat scrap and 5 pounds bone meal is suggested. Milk may replace the meat, but do not leave out the bone meal, particularly in this case.

Will Add A Distinctive Touch To Your Home At Small Cost

Nothing equals the dainty restfulness and charm of the Colonial Bedroom. Simple and sincere, it reflects the true American's love for home. The quaint beds shown here are faithful reproductions of the beds our grandmothers used to sleep in. Grouped with a dresser, a chest of drawers and hand woven rag rugs they make a room of good taste at small cost.

The Guest Room—with Individuality

Picture your guest room with a Colonial bed of graceful shaping, or twin four posters—authentic reproductions of early American masterpieces, effectively arranged with a highboy, a gateleg table and sturdy Windsor chairs with rush bottom seats. The effect is most impressive and the cost within the means of every purse.

Colonial Furniture Is Very Practical

It is practical because of its suitability to rooms of many types and sizes, because of its adaptability for use with other furniture of different styles, because of its durability and everyday usefulness and most of all because of its moderate cost. Thus its appeal rests upon a firmer foundation than personal taste alone.

Bicycles Must Carry Lights

Alderman Schilp of the Fourth ward introduced a resolution for Alderman Joy of the Sixth ward, who was unable to be present at the regular monthly meeting of the common council Wednesday evening, asking that bicycle riders be compelled to carry front and rear lights on their bicycles.

"Yes," said Alderman Belchert of the Second ward, "and trolley cars should also be made to carry tail lights." The alderman from the Second ward offered his suggestion as an amendment to the Joy motion, and resolution and amendment were referred to the corporation counsel to frame an ordinance if feasible.

Alderman Everett of the Eleventh ward said that he believed there was already an ordinance that prohibited a bicycle from carrying double and recommended that the chief of police see that it is enforced.

Strong Argument

"Mother" Ware of Hollywood is strong for the old sturdy Puritan stock, the good old days, and all the other traditions on which the greatness of the nation rests. Jean, her daughter-in-law, is quite the reverse, which creates an ever fertile field for controversy.

"I don't think so much of the men of today," remarked "Mother" Ware recently. "They are too wishy washy. Now, our forefathers were men of iron nerve."

"Oh, I don't know so much about that," retorted Jean. "None of them ever tried to kiss a girl and break a speed law at the same time."—Los Angeles Times.

Traffic Cop's Coldest Beat

Alderman Jacob Schilp of the Fourth ward informed the common council Wednesday evening that the coldest place in the city during the winter was the entrance to the Rondout Creek Bridge on Abeel street, and he said that the police board should arrange to furnish the traffic cop on duty there with some protection from the weather this winter. He believed that some sort of a shelter house could be erected at that point.

Alderman Belchert of the Second ward, in seconding Alderman Schilp's resolution, said that was something he had been advocating for some time.

The resolution was referred to the board of police commissioners.

School for Explorers

For explorers, experience always has been not only the best but the only teacher. No college offered a course in exploration until recently, when the American Geographic society established a school for explorers in New York city, says Popular Science Monthly. The scheme of instruction is entirely practical and based on the experience of noted explorers.

For Simplicity and Good Volume

Tuned Radio Frequency Receiver Using Regenerative Feedback.

There seems to be a general tendency nowadays toward the complex, whether or not any material benefit is to be so gained. A radio fan very sarcastically remarked after building several superheterodynes with little or no success that after a while radio experts would evolve a superheterodyne eight or ten tube receiver that would equal a single circuit regenerative receiver in operation and results. Of course, all know that things are not as bad as this pessimist would have people believe, but it is a fact that there is too much complexity in some circuits. There is even a point beyond which it is not feasible to carry sensitivity because of nearby electrical disturbances. There are now large multiple tube receivers that are so sensitive that they cannot be successfully operated in the center of a city because of the electrical elevators and the subway trains. Although reception is possible through a maze of noise, the results are far from satisfying to the music loving radio fans, who want amplification without distortion. To the average radio fan who builds his own, simplicity and results are all that he wants.

The receiver here described is a tuned radio frequency receiver using regenerative feedback by means of a variometer in the plate circuit of the detector tube (No. 2). The condenser, C1, controls the oscillations of the radio frequency amplifying tube (No. 1), and should be a low loss condenser, such as the new Acme condenser. In fact, nothing but low loss condensers should be used in this receiver. The tuning inductance coils, E-F and G-H, are exactly identical in specifications. The coils, E and G, have five turns of No. 22 D. C. C. magnet wire respectively. The coils F and H have fifty turns of the same size wire. Each unit is mounted or wound on a piece of bakelite tubing 2.5 inches in diameter and four inches long. The coil E, for example, is first wound on the tube and then one-half inch space is allowed and F is then started; do not wind E on top of F or vice versa. The variometer is nothing more than any good standard make of variometer. The wiring of this receiver is still further simplified by the use of Amperite self-adjusting rheostats, marked R in the diagram Three rheostats prevent the tubes from being burned at too high a current. On the front of the panel there are but four dials and a battery switch, not shown in diagram, but inserted in A plus battery lead. The condensers, C1, C2 and C3, are 23-plate variables. The condenser C4 is a mica-fixed condenser of .002 mfd. capacity. Radeco safety fuses are always recommended in trying out new circuits The loss of tubes when trying out new circuits is tremendous.

A Radio-Generative Circuit That Will Be of Interest.

In tuning this circuit place C1 and V at zero positions. The actual tuning is accomplished by C2 and C3. After a station has been picked up it is then clarified by operating C1 and C2, and volume can be increased by moving V and slightly changing C3 to keep the station in exact tune. These three sets of adjustments are all that are necessary. The refinement of a variable grid leak, G, will materially aid in clarifying distant stations.—New York Sun.

Socket Wrenches Can Be Very Easily Made

By C. R. WHITTEMORE

When building radio receivers it sometimes happens that certain nuts are in places very difficult to reach except with a socket wrench. A set of socket wrenches can very easily be made of three pieces of copper tubing one-quarter, five-sixteenths and three-eighths inch outside diameter and two or three inches long. Each piece of copper tubing should be flattened on one end so that a screw driver will fit in snugly. The other end is flared with a punch. This flared end may be placed over practically any type of nut and when pressure is applied it will grip tightly and the nut can then be screwed into place by the screw driver. I have used a set of these wrenches for several months in assembling sets and am sure that anyone trying this idea will find it excellent.

One Moiler's Tribute to Daughter-in-Law

When I first saw my son Tyler's angelic manner under his wife's regime I held my breath, because in the old days Tyler in a beatific state of mind meant Tyler getting ready to break out in a new place.

But as time goes on and the serenity remains unbroken, I repeat to myself that perfect line from the "Just So Stories"—"Not always was the Kangaroo as now we behold him"—a text that I recommended to all mothers who have seen their brisk sons neatly trained by well-selected wives.

Indeed, the longer I live the more ready I am to believe that a young man's wife may be better acquainted with his actual current present day self than his mother can possibly be. My daughter-in-law sees in her husband a forceful man of affairs on whose judgment she implicitly relies. I respect his judgment, too, in a way, but I cannot help knowing that he is the same Tyler who, at the age of four, howled himself into a high fever one day because I would not let him lead a bloodhound in the parade when "Uncle Tom's Cabin" came to town.

Mothers view their sons with what psychologists might call an "associative fringe." We are handicapped by assorted memories We cannot estimate our sons exactly as their wives estimate them. They came upon us at a different stage.—"A Maternal Philosopher" in the Atlantic Monthly.

Observation Relieved Monotony of Illness

It has often been my feeling that perhaps the happiest man is the healthy bookworm who, by laying out a quarter for a second-hand volume, can get as much pleasure in a week as the other fellow, more dependent upon expensive entertainments and indulgencies that draw on his wad The former is among that happy class that can say with the poet, "My mind to me a kingdom is; such pleasant joys therein I find."

But I discovered his equal the other day when visiting a sick friend in Outremont whose house adjoins a vacant lot, says the Montreal Herald. I found him sitting comfortably on the veranda overlooking that lot and studying it through a pair of field glasses.

He asked me: "How many kinds of plants would you suppose there is in that field?"

"About half a dozen," I replied.

"I have already found 77," he assured me, and went on to name them. Confinement to a veranda did not worry him much.

Man's Feathered Friends

Birds are closely allied to the British farmer, shepherd and sportsman and those who are wise in bird lore, rely on their feathered friends for information and warning. The wryneck is the woodman's bird, its hawklike cry in April giving the signal for the stripping of oak trees' bark. The yellow wagtail is a farmer's bird, ushering in the time of spring sowings. As the sandpiper is the angler's companion, the wheateer keeps the shepherd company on lonely downs. Even the miller has his bird in the redwing, called "windmill thrush," since the working of its wings suggests the revolving of a windmill's sails, while it is supposed to seek shelter by windmills in hard weather. Redwings now arrive in force; the pity is that few

Expert Shingle Weavers

In spite of the multiplication of efficient machines to lighten and simplify labor, shingles are still woven (or picked) by hand No machinery has yet been invented capable of eliminating the expert shingle weaver Examine a bunch of shingles as the carpenter takes them apart for shingling the roof, and you will see the unique process by which the compact bunch has been woven. Now a wide shingle, now a narow one, makes the bunch the exact width, and all day long the weaver stands and seizes shingle after shingle thrown out from the sawing machine, and without any false moves weaves them into compact bunches. The term shingle-weaver has been extended by custom, till it now applies to anyone who works in any department of a shingle mill.

Scriptural Translations

Every year scholars are toiling to translate the Scriptures into more and still more dialects. Thousands are plodding all over the globe to put these translations in the hands of all peoples. In the interiors of distant countries, far up the Amazon valley perhaps, or into darkest Africa, where the Bible has never been, colporteurs are tramping with their packs. Motor-cars are carrying the Bible across the desert from Damascus to Bagdad in 48 hours, a journey that was once a matter of six weeks, and by fastest camel post a trip of nine days.

Monuments to Apples

Monuments or markers have been erected to a few of the most noted varieties of apple. In 1893 a monument was built to the Baldwin at Wilmington, near Lowell, Mass. The first in New York was erected in the town of Camillus, Onondaga county, on the original site of the Primate apple trees of John T. Roberts of Syracuse, in 1903. There followed one to the Northern Spy in 1912, and the McIntosh Red in the same year. A monument to the Wealthy was erected at Excelsior, Minn., in 1912.

The Worry Killer

"Don't worry," says the doctor and "don't worry," says the friend, but "how can I stop worrying," says the worried one, "when I have so much to worry about?" Recreation offers the means, says one who knows Every man should have a hobby or two to divert his mind and relax the tension of business and other cares.

Chauncey Depew took up speech-making as a hobby. In order to prepare and deliver his after-dinner speeches, he was compelled to completely forget his duties as railroad president. He is more than ninety years old now and is still serving the New York Central railroad. Gardening, music, reading, art and a thousand other things offer opportunities for persons to forget their troubles. Play is the best kind of exercise and calisthenics will help. Keep busy and do not eat too much.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

SAVING PENNIES

Sometimes it seems as though grown-up people had all the money they possibly could have.

True, they don't admit it. They will often say if you ask them for some:

"What! Do you think money grows on bushes?"

She Saved Every Penny.

And you know, of course, perfectly well that money doesn't grow on bushes, but, you know, too, that they have more than bushes have, so that you think it is rather a foolish speech for them to make.

But, though they always seem to have a little change, and money in their pockets or their purses, and don't seem to be entirely without, as you are often, they have so much to buy with their money—food and clothes and all sorts of things.

A little girl had heard of some grownups who had put aside every twenty-five-cent piece, or quarter, which they received in change for larger amounts of money.

They used these quarters for holidays and trips and all such things.

"We never had enough to go anywhere until we did this," they said.

"When vacation time came we felt as though we needed a fair amount of money, and there wasn't enough.

"But though it is quite, quite difficult, to put aside every quarter, still when you think it is going to be for a beautiful vacation, it is not so hard to do it.

"And you enjoy your vacation so thoroughly."

Now the little girl never got quarters in change—or very seldom—because she didn't have the big sums of money which could be changed into quarters.

But she said to herself:

"I do have pennies. Sometimes they are change from a five-cent piece when I've only wanted something that cost one penny.

"Then I have four pennies in change. Sometimes my daddy and my mother give me pennies, and sometimes I earn pennies running errands and doing chores and all such things.

"I do believe I'll save pennies, and then when I get a big amount I'll buy a nice book."

For this little girl wanted to own a library of her own more than anything else in the world.

On her birthday and at Christmas she received books for presents, but she thought it would be so nice, too, to get books out of her very own money.

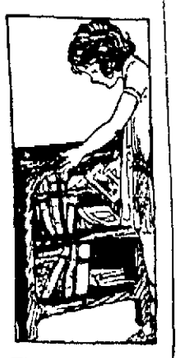
Then she would have her own real library. She had been given a little old bookcase her mother had had as a child, but at present there were not many books in it.

She would like to fill it full of books. She would like to own books so on rainy days and cold days, or when she sat under the pine trees in the summer or up in the old, gnarled apple tree, she could read and re-read her books.

If she owned her books they would be as her own family. How beautiful that would be. Her own family of books!

So she saved every penny she received.

She found that the pennies counted up pretty fast and before long she bought a book. It was a beautiful book, with many characters in it she loved, and she wanted to be able to pick them up and hear them talk at any time—just as she loved it when she could call across the street to her little friend and ask her to come over.



There Were Not Many Books.

By degrees she began filling her library shelves. After a while she had books of adventure, stories of other children, stories of animals, beautiful books with lovely pictures—oh, such dear, dear books!

And the most wonderful thing of all was to think that even a little girl could get big things such as books which she really wanted out of little, tiny pennies—just because she gave the little, tiny pennies a chance to become bigger amounts of money. Big enough to get big books!

She was so very proud of it and so very happy because of it.

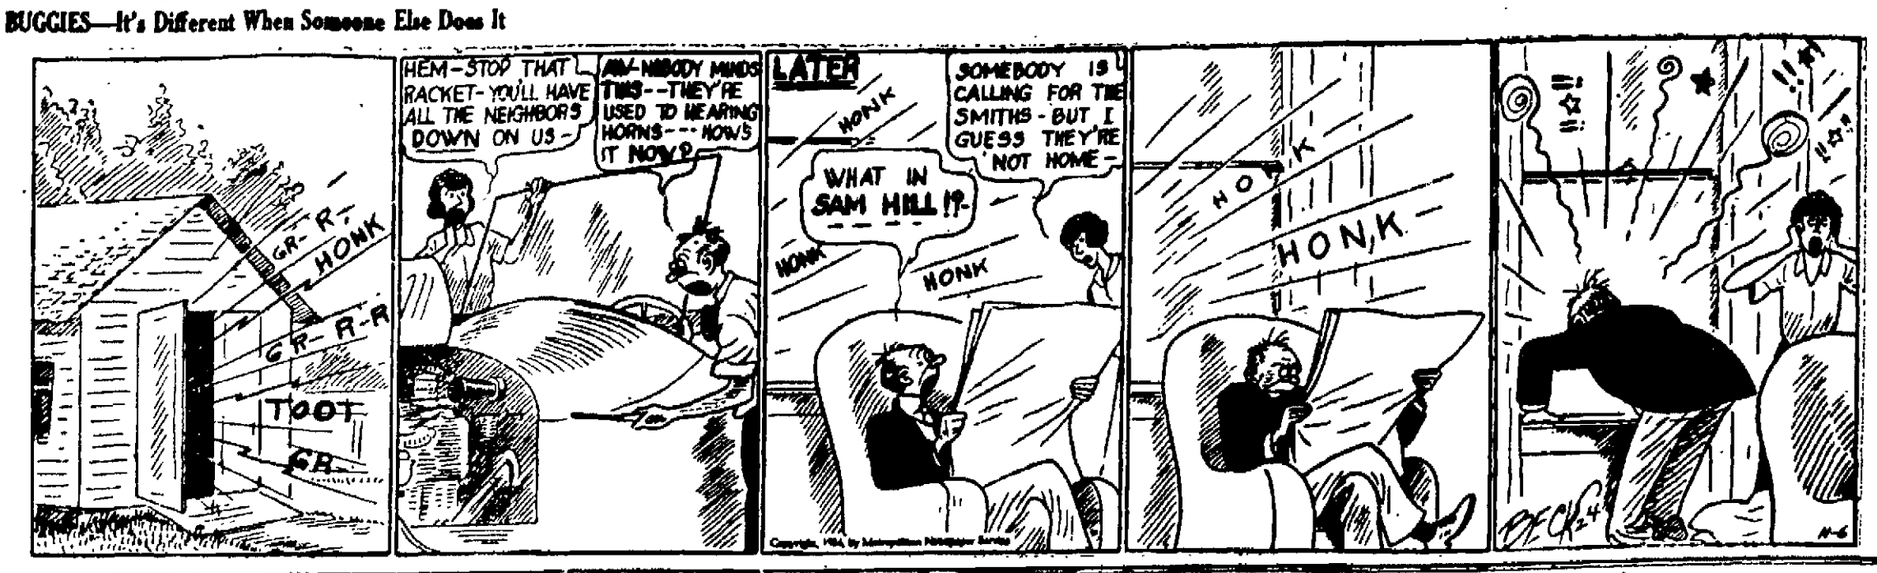
GAS BUGGIES—It's Different When Someone Else Does It



KEEPING WELL

MOSQUITOES CONVICTED OF MURDER

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

WHEN Laveran, in 1880, discovered the malaria germ in the blood of patients who had "chills and fever" he solved a problem which had puzzled the world for centuries.

But how did this germ get into the patient's blood? Until this was known, there was no way of preventing the disease.

Malaria is generally found in the neighborhood of marshes. Did the germ get into the body through drinking stagnant water?

Experiments showed that persons given marsh water to drink did not get malaria, neither were the malaria germs found in stagnant water.

It had long been believed by the peasants in Italy that mosquitoes were responsible for malaria but there was no evidence to support the idea.

In 1854, Louis David Beauperthuy, a French physician and naturalist, decided that malaria was caused by mosquito bites and that the disease occurred near swamps and marshes, not because the swampy ground gave off poison, but because mosquitoes bred in such places in great quantities.

Charles Finlay of Havana, in 1881, came to the same conclusion. He added the suggestion that the mosquitoes were simply carriers who conveyed the disease from a sick person to a well person.

But all this was theory. There were no facts to prove it. It was not until 1895 that Sir Ronald Ross, an English surgeon in the medical service in India, was ordered to a district in which malaria was very common and began a series of experiments by which he proved that malaria is carried by one kind of mosquito, now known as the anopheles mosquito, and that it is only carried by the female.

If a lady anopheles bites a person suffering from malaria and sucks his blood, the germs develop in the body of the mosquito. At the end of 12 days, if the infected mosquito bites a healthy person, the malaria germs pass into the body of the healthy person and cause chills and fever. The same mosquito can infect any number of persons. Infection generally takes place at night, when the mosquito comes from her hiding place in search of food.

Since only mosquitoes can carry malaria, the control of the disease is purely a question of the control of mosquitoes.

Gentlemen:

A few days ago after a fuss with my husband over money matters, I picked up "True Story."

If the writer had known me he could not have written my story more truly. The climax of "Cutting Loose" kept me from going the wrong way. I saw that I was in the wrong, so then and there I started anew.

Wants Municipal Skating Rink

Alderman J. Philip Beichert of the Second ward introduced a resolution at the common council session Wednesday evening at the city hall calling attention to the need of a municipal skating rink for the residents of the city. There were several available sites including the Athletic Field and the Kingston Fair Grounds, and he recommended that a committee of three be appointed from the council to take the matter up with the board of public works. The alderman in his resolution stated that the skating rink could be made self sustaining by charging an admission of not less than 10 nor more than 15 cents per person.

President Dempsey appointed as such a committee to confer with the board of public works, Aldermen Beichert, Smith and Everett.

Mother's Absence Causes Trouble for Children

MRS. MARIE J. N AINSLIE

Two years ago Mrs. Marie Josephine Newton Ainslie, former wife of a New York City art dealer, placed her two children in a boarding school and disappeared. A wealthy woman is willing to adopt them if the mother can be found to give her consent. Otherwise, they will have to go to a State institution.

VEERED AWAY FROM GATES OF ETERNITY

Writer Puts on Record His Many Narrow Escapes.

A lot of prominent writers have been writing pieces—and selling them, too—telling about how near they came to dying in the doctor's last campaign in the abdominal sector. All these fellows have produced only one round trip apiece to the gates of eternity. I can do better than that. So could you.

There was that time when I was a kid, father said: "Take this castor oil." I said: "I'll die first!" I took the castor oil. A close shave, you'll admit.

When I was a very young man I met the most wonderful girl in the world. (No, not that one. The other one.) I told her that if she didn't marry me I would kill myself. The next week she ran off with the druggist's clerk. I shiver even yet when I think of how close I came to doing a good turn for the undertaker.

They had a county fair in the town I was in a couple of years ago. An aviator was taking up passengers for $10 a trip. I didn't go.

And only last week my Uncle Bill told me one of his inimitable stories about Pat and Mike. I nearly died laughing.—Judge.

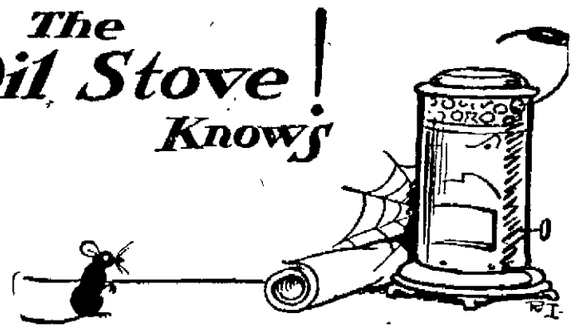
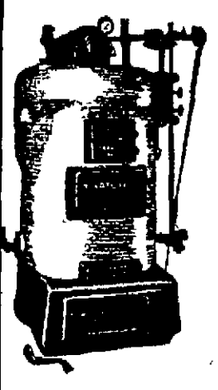
The Oil Stove! Knows





"HERE I've been tucked away in the attic ever since they put a Thatcher Round Boiler in the cellar. In the old days they used to depend upon me pretty regularly to help out, when the mercury kept close company with the thermometer bulb. But I have not shown myself since the Thatcher arrived. Take it from me, there's no need for extra heating equipment with a Thatcher Round Boiler on the job."

WITH A POINT

Act nobly today, meanly tomorrow.

Quarrel and strife make short life.

Sweet language multiplies friends.

To get efficiency, think efficiency.

Opinion in good men is but knowledge in the making.

Pity is love when grown into excess.

The great end of life is not knowledge, but action.

After all there is but one race—humanity.

The man who loses his opportunity loses himself.

It is not enough to do good. One must do it in a good way.

You have not converted a man because you have silenced him.

Anything that is bad taste is never timely.

Regret is the stepping stone to man's final salvation.

One can always see how other people waste money.

It is the red-tape-worm that is unhealthy for the body politic.

If a little knowledge is dangerous, where is the man who has so much as to be out of danger?

It is the customary fate of new truths to begin as heresies, and to end as superstitions.

It is a rule in friendship, when distrust enters in at the foregate, love goes out at the postern.

Any father is an authority on the management of other people's children.

Some people seem to think they ought to apologize when you do them an injury.

Help a man out of trouble and he will remember you when he gets into trouble again.

You can dodge responsibilities; but you cannot dodge the results of your dodging.

Nephew of Mrs. Ogden Reid Dies Strangely

MISS MARJORIE SCHNEIDER

Mystery surrounds the death of Charles Rogers, nephew of Mrs. Ogden Reid, wife of the owner of the New York Herald-Tribune, of New York City, whose body was found in the automobile of Miss Marjorie Schneider, on a road just outside New Haven, Conn., where he was employed as a bond salesman. His skull was fractured, and Miss Schneider was too seriously injured to tell what had happened.

Cemetery Centuries Old

Urns containing the ashes of human beings believed to have been cremated 2,600 years ago, have been discovered at Wendon, in the valley of the Weser. Dr. Jacob Friesen, who made the find of 127 graves, believes he has unearthed a cemetery of agriculturists who inhabited the Weser district several centuries before Christ walked in Galilee.

Find New Lake in Park

Although Sequoia National park has been a public playground for more than thirty years; new discoveries still are made. A forest ranger recently returned from a three-day trip in the Mount Silliman region and reported a lake larger than any hitherto known in the park. The find has been tentatively named Crater Lake.

On the Receiving End

Wifey—My, but you took a long time to give mother that message over the phone. What in the world were you talking about?

Hubby (wearily)—I wasn't talking, dear, just listening.—Chicago American.

VIVID CONTRAST IN WELCOME TO PRINCE

From no source did the prince of Wales receive a more gracious welcome to America than from this country's exclusive organization.

To be a member of the Baronial Order of Runnymede your ancestor must have been one of those barons who 709 years ago requested King John to sign on the dotted line of Magna Charta itself.

Philadelphia is the headquarters of this baronial order and here it was founded, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Charles Marshall, whose ancestor, Christopher Marshall, was a live wire of the Revolution, showed me the letter of welcome he sent to the prince on behalf of the Runnymedes and likewise the gracious acknowledgment from the future successor of King John.

Here you see vivid contrasts. The boyish and popular prince—the continuity of seven centuries of kings since John—cheered in a land that was unknown to civilized man for 250 years after King John was in his grave.

Remedy for Scaly Leg

Scaly leg is a common summer disease among poultry. It is caused by a small parasite that burrows into the scales of the bird's leg, causing them to protrude. One good way to cure it is to fill an empty fruit can with coal oil and keep the legs of the bird immersed in this for a few minutes. If this is done twice a week for a month it will usually kill the parasites, but it is well to supplement this treatment by using lard as an ointment for the legs.

Worth-While Industry in California Town

A new church in a small town is considerable of an event and the progress of the contractor is closely watched by every member of the community.

In Fullerton they ceased talking of "the church building" and referred to it as the "church plant." Some even dropped the "church," so the stranger who heard it thus described concluded it was a manufacturing plant.

"What is going to be made in the new plant?" he asked the small son of the host.

The little fellow hesitated, looked appealingly from his father to his mother, but gaining no inspiration from either, replied:

"We're going to make 1924 model Californians."—Los Angeles Times.

Rain Good for New Suits

Cloth from which suits for men and women are made, is invariably kept in a moist condition when being made up at the mills in order to give strength to the wool and to prevent breakage when it is being woven. A dry atmosphere would mean many "faults" in the piece. For this reason cloth makers are warning the public that rain occasionally will not hurt a new outfit, but on the other hand will do some suits a lot of good. One tailor suggests ten minutes in a misting rain as the best "drink" for a suit, especially in the early days of its life.

Souvenir Hunters Fooled

Craze for souvenirs is likely to be carried rather far at times. In the church of St. Andrew Undershaft, in the city of London, is a monument to the author, John Stow, his figure being seated at a table, writing a book. In his right hand is a quill pen, which is renewed annually. Until recent years, this pen was continually being stolen, the souvenir hunters having the impression that it was the original pen with which Stow wrote his works.

How to Open Sack

To open cloth sugar or salt sacks which are stitched, place the double stitching to the left and begin pulling at the end away from you. This saves so much annoyance.

PLUTARCH.

Plutarch, Nov 6.—Preaching service as usual next Sunday at 2.30 p. m. A preacher from Kingston is expected to have charge of the service as the pastor is to take part in a Missionary Pageant, which is to be held in the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church, Kingston, on Sunday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Mary Palmateer and Fred Van Nostrand spent Sunday with relatives at Tillson.

The revival meetings closed on Saturday night. They were quite well attended. All feel the meetings have benefited and helped each one. The Rev. E. E. Renn is a wonderful preacher. All appreciate his coming here and giving inspiring and helpful sermons. He has nine weeks of revival work before conference. All feel that the church has been helped by these meetings. Seven were taken in the church on Sunday and three more are expected to come in later.

Mrs. Kniffen is confined to her home by illness. She is about 89 years old.

John Markle and daughter, Miss Luella, were business visitors in Kingston on Thursday last.

William Van Vleit and Fred Palmateer were kept busy on Tuesday, taking the voters out to New Paltz.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry McCormick entertained the Rev. E. E. Renn and wife at supper on Thursday last. The Rev. R. B. Guice was unable to be present as he was called to Philadelphia on business.

Three Districts For Second Ward

If Alderman J. Philip Beichert's suggestion is adopted, the Second ward will be divided into three election districts instead of the present two districts. The alderman from the Second ward offered a resolution at the common council session Wednesday evening that some action be taken in the matter owing to the rapid increase in the number of voters in that ward. The resolution was referred to Corporation Counsel James Jenkins to advise the council as to the proper procedure to take in the matter.

Sweeney of the Third ward Wednesday evening offered the following resolution at the common council session: "Resolved that I have asked four different times for two incandescent lights to be placed on Hemlock avenue, between Clifton avenue and Tubby street, but no attention has ever been given to it; so for the protection of so many who have to travel through this unlighted street I am asking permission to be allowed to erect two poles on said street whereon two lamps will be placed and kept burning at night without any cost to the city. Our workers have to travel this way early at morning and late at night and they have to have light to find their way." It was referred to the board of public works.

LATEST NEWS OF NEW YORK STATE FARM ORGANIZATIONS

Prepared for This Paper by the New York State Farm Bureau Federation, Ithaca, N. Y.

Canning Crops Growers to Meet in Rochester

Leading canning crops growers of New York state will be invited to attend an open meeting at the Hotel Rochester on Nov. 18 at 10:30 a. m., according to Leo Allen, manager of the New York Canning Crops Co-operative association. This association is calling the meeting to give the growers a complete report of what the organization has been able to accomplish and to give them an opportunity to decide whether they believe there is a place in New York state for such an association. There are now 1,420 growers in the state selling their canning crops co-operatively through the state association. Twenty-one local units of growers are organized and affiliated under the state organization.

This organization in its present form has been active in New York state for three years past, handling from one hundred thousand to two hundred thousand and fifty dollars worth of crops in a season. It is expected that if the association is continued this volume will be greatly increased.

Speakers at the meeting will include C. A. Rogers of Bergen, president of the Canning Crops association; H. C. Thompson of the College of Agricuture at Ithaca, and L. R. Simmons of the marketing committee of the New York State Farm Bureau federation. This committee has been working for some time with the growers on their marketing possibilities through associated effort and it is expected that some new features will be brought out at the meeting.

Farm and Home Bureau Federations Will Meet

A very full two-day schedule is planned for the county delegates who will attend the annual meeting of the New York State Farm Bureau federation at Syracuse on Nov. 6 and 7, according to the program of the meeting recently sent out by Secretary E. V. Underwood.

Reports on what the farm bureau federation had done during the year past will occupy the first morning session. In the afternoon J. W. Coverdale, secretary of the Grain Marketing company of Chicago; C. E. Ladd, director of extension at the state college of agriculture, and H. E. Babcock, general manager of the G. L. F. Exchange, will speak to the delegates. On the following day the secretaries of the various federation committees will be heard and then plans for new business will be made and the election of officers will take place.

The New York State Home Bureau Federation will meet in Syracuse on Nov. 5, 6 and 7, holding a joint session with the farm bureau federation on the evening of Nov. 6. At this session the delegates will hear Dr. Liberty Hyde Bailey and Prof. Anna Botsford Comstock of Cornell.

Pyrke Praises Federation Work on T. B. Eradication

"Bovine tuberculosis eradication in New York state is in a hundred per cent better condition than it was last year at this time and credit to this condition is largely due to the tuberculosis committee of the New York State Farm Bureau federation," Commissioner Berne A. Pyrke told farm bureau managers and extension workers at a conference held at Ithaca on Oct. 29. Mr. Pyrke stated that the plan of allocating funds among counties according to the cow enumeration and the percentage of affected cattle in the county has proved very practicable so far. This plan was put into operation a couple of months ago at the suggestion of the federation T. B. committee.

Farm Bureau Essay Contest Closes on Nov. 10

Boys and girls who are writing on "Why Dad Belongs to the Farm Bureau" must have their essays in at their county farm bureau office on Nov. 10 if they are to be eligible to the county, state and national prizes. The essays will be judged on facts, how the story is told, English, spelling and punctuation, general appearance and neatness.

The counties are offering prizes of $10 and $5 and the state federation is offering a similar prize. In addition the writers of the four best essays in the United States are to be awarded by the American Farm Bureau Federation with a prize trip to Chicago Dec. 8, 9 and 10.

Fruit and Vegetable Production Increases in New York

Increase in the fruit and vegetable business in this state is indicated in a recent report received by the transportation department of the New York State Bureau Federation. The report shows that the New York, Ontario and Western railway purchases early this year 100 refrigerator cars in anticipation of a growth in the fruit and vegetable business along their line. The expected business arrived and the additional equipment provided refrigerator cars without delay.

Common Council Approved Mayor Block's Suggestion That $8,000 be Included in Budget of Next Year Instead of the Usual $5,000.

Mayor Morris Block sent a communication to the common council Wednesday evening recommending that the aldermen approve the placing of an appropriation of $8,000 in next year's tax budget for the Kingston City Library, instead of the usual $5,000 as in the past few years. Under the charter provision there has been appropriated to the library $3,000 each year and during the past few years an additional sum of $2,000 has been given the library.

That the library needs more funds to carry on the work was shown by a communication from M. J. Michael, president of the library board, in which he stated that the expenses for this fiscal year would be $7,688. The library has 11,400 books on the shelves and during the year has circulated 64,922 volumes.

The mayor's suggestion that the council approve placing the sum stated in next year's budget was adopted by a vote of ten ayes. Two aldermen were not present at the meeting and Alderman James J. Sweeney of the Third ward would not vote "aye" on the proposition.

The Muir-Kauffman evangelistic campaign at the West Camp Lutheran Church has been so successful that the evangelists have been asked to remain a third week and have consented for the first time in their experience. Sunday night after a great song service and a straight from the shoulder address on "Salvation," over fifty people hit the trail. Tuesday night another large congregation assembled and many came to the altar. Services are held every night at 8 o'clock. Delegations were present from Kingston, Napanoch, Alsen, Andes, Saugerties and Malden. Thursday night will be "Mothers' Night." Prof. R. E. Kauffmann, the baritone soloist, sings at each service.

ELIZABETH GRIFFIN.

First distinguished herself by the book "Letters of Henry and Frances" which contained the genuine correspondence between her and her husband before their marriage. She was a novelist and dramatist of some eminence, and also wrote the "Memoirs of Ninon de L'Enclos," the "Morality of Shakespeare's Dramas, Illustrated," and three novels, four comedies, and "Essays addressed to Young Married Women." She died in Ireland in 1793.

"PEACE AT ANY PRICE."

The cry of "Peace at any price" has always been heard in all nations that were at war. The first Americans to advocate this policy of weakness and meekness, and to condemn even defensive warfare were probably Sarah Moore Grinke and her brother, Thomas Smith Grinke. The former was born in Charleston, S. C., 133 years ago today, November 6, 1791. She and her sister, Angeline, liberated their slaves and moved to Philadelphia, joining the anti-slavery societies and becoming affiliated with the Quakers. In addition to her peace and abolition propaganda, she published several volumes on woman's rights. The Grinkes were descended from a French Hugenot family. Thomas Smith Grinke became a distinguished lawyer in Charleston, but was more widely known on account of his addresses on peace and religion. He held that even defensive warfare is wicked and asked what steps he would take if he were in command at Charleston and the city attacked by pirates, he replied that he would marshal the Sunday school children and lead them in procession to meet the buccaneers, who would be so affected by the sight that they would immediately abandon their bloodthirsty intentions. Happily for Charleston he was not called upon to put his doctrines of non-resistance to the test.

Y. M. C. A.

The first Young Men's Christian Association was organized in London in 1844 by George Williams, who was knighted and became Sir George Williams in 1894, and who died 19 years ago today. The "father of the Y. M. C. A." was born in Somersetshire in 1821, and at the age of twenty he went to London as a junior assistant in the drapery establishment of Hitchcock & Rogers The young man from the country, like so many others who have gone from the small towns and rural districts to a large city, was very lonely, and, although he made many friends among his fellow employes, they had no place where they could spend their leisure with pleasure and profit to themselves. Young Williams suggested a social club, and this idea met with the approval of his employers, who provided a room in which the young men could meet. In 1844 this informal organization developed into the first Young Men's Christian Association with a charter membership of thirteen—certainly not an unlucky number in this case. The purpose of this pioneer Y. M. C. A. was to "improve the spiritual condition of the young men engaged in the drapery and other trades."

Allaben Flyer Captures Trophy

Basil Rowe of Allaben, N. Y., flying an SVA machine was an easy winner of the two, three and four place in the civilian plane race for the Allen-Hinkle Trophy, October 11, at Wichita, Kansas. Rowe started third but sprinted to first place on the last leg of the first lap and kept this position the remainder of the 50 miles. His average was 112.8 miles an hour His time was 26 minutes and 39.58 seconds for the 50 miles.

Walter Beach of Wichita, flying a Swallow, took second place at a speed of 105 miles an hour.

Hans Hoyte in a Yackety Sport took fourth place.

A 25 mile an hour wind from the south slowed down the races somewhat. Driving both against and with the wind on the out and in straightways equalized the speed somewhat but the difficulties at the turns drew heavily on the time the fliers were able to make. An air pocket just off the starting line caused planes to dip dangerously near the earth and endangered occupants of a number of automobiles that were parked in the prohibited zone.

Son to Be Proud Of

HONEST J. ATKINS' POLICY

By PEARCE THORNE

(© Doubleday, Page & Co.)

THE old woman behind the cigar counter in the lobby of the bank building was flustered by the rush of customers. This may have been the reason she gave John Atkins too much change. She gave him three one-dollar bills, and instead of a fourth one, gave him a five-dollar bill. So that instead of four dollars change he got eight.

A queer little thrill ran through John Atkins when at the street door he made sure of this—a thrill especially strange in that it ran through the bosom of a bank president whose salary was fifteen thousand a year plus what additions came to it in the form of stock bonuses from successful borrowers.

John Atkins was surprised at himself. He was so surprised that he continued down the steps and strolled up the street, determining to settle this matter of unexpected thrills before he retraced his way and returned the five dollars to the trembling old woman at the cigar counter. The day was balmy, his cigar was mildly stimulating; and after glancing down to assure himself that his gray vest, black shoes and gray spats were immaculate, he leisurely crossed the street, mentally thanking heaven that he was still young enough to be interested in himself.

He saw at once that the incident—regardless of the sum involved—struck a chord which vibrated throughout the whole realm of moral ideas. For that reason it was not only interesting, it was vital—because his reaction to the incident was a true indication of his character. It disclosed his character, and at the same time did not even remotely impinge his reputation. That, he knew, like Caesar's wife, was above suspicion. He was one of the few men in "Wall Street" whose presence as chairman of an organization committee insured that a fair distribution would be made of the milk in the coconut; he relieved tensions between temporarily affiliated "crowds" who had obligations to "get even" and introduced an element of friendliness and fairness into the most business-like meeting. Someone had called him "Honest John Atkins." This name had fitted him like an old hat and had stuck to him like a poor relation. Ever since, he had been "Honest John Atkins," and to preserve that title for himself had become something as near as he ever got to a religion.

So much for reputation, he thought, shifting his cigar to the other side of his close-cropped gray moustache and turning the corner at Wall street on his way to the post office. Now for the ultimate morality inherent in a five-dollar bill.

Consideration one: Did he need the money? Answer: He did not. Consideration two: Did the old woman need the money? He remembered that the installation of the little shop had been under the supervision of a hard-faced, flashily dressed, old-young man who had ordered the old woman about like a slave, making her more tremulous than ever. The flashy old-young man seemed the power behind the throne, and the loss therefore would fall upon him. The old woman consequently might be dismissed. The question became: Did the young man need the money? Apparently he did not. Therefore the matter of human need—the emotional phase of the subject—had been disposed of, and the problem now pivoted upon the purely moral and intellectual question: Shall I return this five-dollar bill; and if so, why?

John Atkins was rather pleased with his analysis of the matter so far. With an amiable smile on his ruddy face, he patted the small package of bonds in his pocket. He had told a customer in Boston that he would address, register and mail this package with his "own hands." And he always kept his word. It was such little personal touches that showed John Atkins a master craftsman.

"And if so, why?" John Atkins could think of no reason why he should return the five-dollar bill. Of course, it would be the conventionally "honest" thing to do But rules—he reflected—are made for people unable to guide themselves. A man of his caliber could afford to figure things out on their merits A man of his caliber was really superior to ordinary laws. He felt a sudden rush of pleasure at thinking of himself as being that sort of man. He threw away his cigar and entered the post office.

"I want to register this, please," he said at the registry window, and he slid the five-dollar bill across the glass counter with a package of bonds.

The man behind the grating turned and called to someone in the rear of the room.

"Here's another one, Jim," he shouted.

In a moment the second man had come over to the window. He took up the five-dollar bill, stretched it out and looked carefully at one of its corners. Then he glanced with quick suspicion at John Atkins. But his square face, with its pug nose and blue chin, wrinkled into a smile as he recognized the banker.

"By the love of Pat, Mr. Atkins" he laughed, "I was jist about to pinch you! This note's phony. They've been a lot of 'em loose around here lately and we're on the trail. I wonder now, kin you remember where you got this little law-breaker?"

John Atkins felt himself grow warm. Someone had had the audacity to hand him a counterfeit five-dollar bill, to put him—a banker—in the position of offering spurious currency!

"I most certainly can, Casey. You come with me and we can get there before they close."

When the old woman looked up and saw the badge Casey was disclosing, she closed her eyes and would have fallen had he not caught her by the arm.

"There, there!" said Casey soothingly, "you mustn't take on so. It's just a talk we'll have, and then you'll be home in time for supper."

The old creature drew her greenish black shawl more closely about her throat. Suddenly her knees gave way, and despite Casey's arm she sank to the floor.

"Oh," she moaned, "I was afeared! Charley said it was all right . . . and I believed him . . . but all the time, I am afeared.

"Where is Charley now?" asked Honest John Atkins.

A dim radiance came in her glazed eyes, like a lamp lighted behind black curtains.

"Ain't you got him?" she cried. "Ain't you got my boy?"

"Not yet," said Casey.

She held out her trembling arms to be lifted up. "Thank God! I'll go with you—now."

Honest John Atkins forgot about the incident until Officer Casey's card was handed him by his secretary some four weeks later.

"Well," began Casey, as he sat on the edge of a mahogany chair and hung his black derby over one knee, "we've done what we could, but that ain't much." Apparently he was embarrassed about the subject he was leading up to. "We got indictments of Charlie and all his gang rushed through the grand jury so that they could be tried at this term of court if we caught 'em; but we didn't ketch 'em." Casey cleared his throat. "That is, we didn't ketch nobody but the old woman, and I came to see you—to see if you didn't want to drop the case against her. She's technically guilty, all right; and we can convict her in twenty minutes. She knew Charlie printed the bills. But she says she didn't know it was wrong. She didn't think her boy would do wrong. Of course, ignorance of the law is no excuse. But I thought—well, I just thought I'd come by and talk to you about it."

Honest John Atkins leaned back in his swivel chair and, resting an elbow on each chair arm, put the tips of his long, blunt fingers together. This counterfeiting plot had invaded the sacred precincts of his own personality. He himself had passed one of the bills. A feeling of indignation pervaded him.

"Mr. Casey," said he, "we must consider first of all our duty to society. If we permit dishonest persons to escape we shall never succeed in stamping out dishonesty. You may say to the United States attorney that my institution insists upon a conviction."

Casey got reluctantly to his feet. At the door he paused and looked back; but as if realizing the futility of discussion jabbed his derby over one eye and went scowling down the corridor.

The Root of Corruption

The late Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany chieftain, used to tell a story to illustrate the corrupting power of money.

"A New York man"—so his story would run—"attended a colored church in Nola Chucky one Sunday morning while traveling in the South, and put a $20 bill in the collection plate.

"At this the collector gave a great start. He rushed the plate, with its little heap of coppers and its clean, crisp yellow banknote, up to the pulpit. There he and the preacher and a couple of deacons conversed excitedly in hissing whispers for some time

"Finally the collector tiptoed down to the New York man and muttered in his ear:

"'Boss, when is yo' gwine ter leave town?'

"'This afternoon,' said the New Yorker.

"'Wall, boss,' whispered the collector, 'we all's done decided fo' to pass her ef you don't say nuffin'. Dere ain't a man in Nola Chuck' could tell her from a good one.'"

Bobbed Hair Long Ago

"The new woman" will no longer be able to employ as a sign of her emancipation a bobbed head of hair. It has just been discovered in the little town of Wymington, Northamptonshire, that this fashion is at least five hundred years old. The restoration of the parish church there has revealed a painting depicting women with their hair bobbed in the style of 1924.

Hidden under coating of thin plaster were discovered wall paintings representing the resurrection and the judgment. The plaster has now been carefully removed to show the decorations. Most of the figures in the paintings are women. Some have their hair falling about the shoulders, but the artist has given the majority short hair, cut exactly in the manner of the modern girl's coiffure.

The vicar, Rev. C. L. Drew, believes the paintings are of the same age as the church, which was built in 1350.

Electricity on Submarines

The electric storage battery is the thing that has made the submarine possible. When these under-sea boats are cruising on the surface of the water they are driven by steam or gas engines but when they dive toward Davy Jones' locker the engines are stopped and electric motors using energy drawn from the storage batteries keep the propellers whirling. When back on the surface the engines also drive electric dynamos which recharge the storage batteries. On board the U. S. S. V-1, recently launched at the Portsmouth (N. H.) navy yard, practically all of the work is done electrically save propelling the ship when surface cruising.

In Society

"I am giving a lawn party if you'd like some society films."

"Sorry," said the news reel man, "but I can't take any photographers away from the swimming pools."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

WAY TO IDENTIFY ANY STOLEN CAR

Simple Matter to Place Secret Marks on Machine in Out-of-Way Places.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

You wouldn't leave a bag of $20 gold pieces parked at the curb even though they were stamped "In God We Trust." In fact the person who did so would immediately be sent to the insane asylum. But nine out of every ten motorcar owners, according to statistics, are fully as careless with their machines, which often represent a bag of gold pieces far too heavy to carry.

You think nothing of leaving your car for long periods without locking it. And if you are fortunate enough in still having it, why it is nothing less than sheer luck. It is little wonder that automobile thieves live off the fat of the land and find such a profitable field for their work.

How Thieves Work.

Thieves usually work in pairs and when they see an unlocked car at the curb, they drive another machine alongside of the unlocked one. It is an easy matter to step from one into the other. In case they are discovered in the actual theft, the other car is the means of getting away. As a rule they take the one that offers the least resistance for an easy get-away.

Suppose your car is one of those stolen. Could you identify it with a new paint job or other disguising features? Remember that the car is the thief's property until proved otherwise. Without some real proof you cannot, of course, claim your property. With the engine numbers and frame identification removed, you cannot possibly tell your car from another, especially on account of the fact that there are so many standard models.

Identification Marks.

It is a simple matter to put secret identification marks on your machine. Inside the hubcaps and on the frame are excellent places. Or you might loosen some part of the upholstery and insert your business card. In this event you would catch the thief redhanded. Suppose that those identification places were discovered and removed—surely there are other ways that will suggest themselves to you from an observation of your own particular car. And a thief isn't superhuman; he cannot locate all the identification places.

But do it right now. Don't wait until the car is gone.

It only takes a few seconds to lock your car. And, as a rule, the thief shadows his prospect several days before he steals it. If he sees that you are careful it is a ten to one shot that he'll pass your machine up for one that is easier to steal.

So don't put temptation in his way.

Well Recommended Paint for Use on the Muffler

It is difficult to find a satisfactory paint for exhaust pipe and muffler, because of the heat of those parts. Here is a highly recommended muffler paint: Boiled linseed oil, one-fifth pound; Japan varnish, one-fifth pound; turpentine, two-fifths pound; lampblack, one and a half ounces; powdered graphite, one and a half ounces; powdered oxide of manganese, three-eighths ounce. Mix the linseed oil and Japan varnish well together, then add in order, stirring all the time, the lampblack, the graphite and the powdered manganese. Add the turpentine, until the quantity mentioned has been used. This mixture, should be used as soon as it is mixed, as it dries quickly. Every time the brush is dipped in it should be stirred. It is well to paint the muffler while it is hot, after having cleaned it thoroughly.

Keeping Car Under Control on Grades

In driving down steep grades various resistances may be utilized to keep the car under control. If the engine is kept running and the gears are in high, there is only slight resistance. This may be increased by shifting into second speed, and further increased by shifting into first. When still further resistance is needed to maintain a check on the progress of the car and it is not desired to use the brakes the ignition may be shut off and the throttle closed. By opening the throttle the resistance is still further increased. The maximum of resistance and the best control on a dangerous steep hill may be obtained by shifting into first, switching off the ignition and applying the brakes at intervals.

Grabbing Rattles in Their Infancy Is Right Plan

The more expensive a car is the longer you expect it to run without rattles. Yet it is possible with even the lowest priced cars to keep the rattles out if you but catch them as they appear. They will come one by one and if they are caught in the same manner they will not be nearly so hard to remove as they would be if they are allowed to accumulate in a troublesome chorus before they are stopped.

Rattles in the brake linkage and other parts under the car can be found by shutting off the engine and allowing the car to coast in neutral gear. If someone stands or sits on the running board while the driver does this, many sounds that have been difficult to locate will be readily found. These link rods are a typical example of noise that will often defy the efforts of the driver to find, while another person sitting on the running board or outside the car will have little or no difficulty in locating them.

Place for Extinguisher on the Running Board

Where to put the extinguisher is an open question. Under the dash is the customary place. But almost every motor car fire endangers this spot. Flames sometimes envelop the extinguisher before the driver has a chance to unhook it. The most logical place, from the fire standpoint, is to place it on the running board, but this not only spoils the car's looks, but tempts children to meddle with it. For roadsters, especially, the extinguisher can be carried on brackets at the base of the driver's seat. In this position it is very handy. For touring cars a good place is the back of the front seat. Here it is accessible, that is the main thing. It would be less conspicious if painted black. And in winter it would be covered by the robes. In this respect, however, use your own judgment.—Motor Life.

Poor Cement Is Blamed for Failure of Patches

One reason, perhaps, why a great many roadside and amateur tire patches do not hold when the tube is assembled into the shoe is that rubber cement is used which is not up to the mark.

Usually the cement has been reposing in the car's tire repair kit for quite a time, and it is therefore not so fresh and active as it once was. Be sure to get the best materials you can, in the first place, and, further, before going on a long trip examine the tire repair kit to make sure everything in it is in good condition.

Better an inspection before the start of the trip than regrets at the poor shape everything is in later when called upon to fix a puncture out on the road.

Sweeney Wants New Ambulance

Alderman of Third Ward Offers Resolution Recommending That City Obtain a Modern Ambulance —Other Matters Before Aldermen.

The question of purchasing a new city ambulance, which has lain dormant for some time, was revived Wednesday evening at the common council session when Alderman James J. Sweeney of the Third ward offered a resolution that the city obtain a new and modern ambulance. On motion of Alderman Schilp of the Fourth ward the resolution was referred to the supply committee.

The alderman from the Third ward also offered resolutions that an arc light be placed on Mead street, between East Chester and Grant streets, and that the large rock that is in the center of Mead street be removed. He also moved that the holes in Clifton avenue be filled in and that the brick pavement at the Broadway railroad crossing be attended to. The resolutions were referred to the board of public works.

A resolution offered by Alderman Smith of the Twelfth ward that the holes in Washington avenue in front of Merritt's market be filled in was also referred to the board of public works.

A resolution offered by Alderman Everett of the Eleventh ward that sewer and water be extended in Josephine street, was referred to the board to public works and the water board.

Alderman Sweeney of the Third ward offered a resolution that on the corner of Derrenbacher street and Farrelly street there exists a very "uncreditable condition" due to the fact that there was no place for the rain water to run off except over private property, and that some action be taken in the matter. It was referred to the board of public works.

Alderman Everett's resolution that the culvert at Josephine street and Delta Place be fixed was referred to the board of public works.

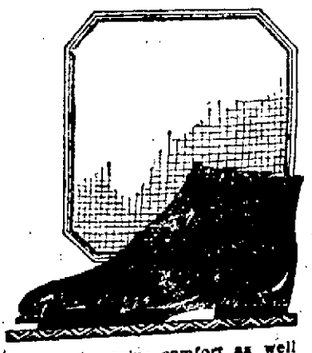
High Shoes for Men



Men who value comfort as well as style in their footwear are showing an increasing partiality for shoes like the black kid ones shown above. This model with stitching as its only trimming illustrates the present trend back to more conservative lines and shades which is manifesting itself in smart masculine footwear. High shoes are increasing in popularity particularly among business men.

COACH DUMM ADDRESSES HI-Y CLUB MEETING

Wednesday evening a meeting of the Hi-Y Club was held at the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Dumm, head coach of the K. H. S. football team, was the speaker of the evening. Mr. Dumm chose for his topic, "Forest Recreation." His speech was a very interesting account of life in the north woods, as he has experienced it. Mr. Dumm described in detail, with the aid of specific examples, the equipment necessary for a canoing trip in the Adirondack Mountains.

When Pillory Was Used

The use of the pillory for the punishment of evil doers was only abolished in England during comparatively recent times, and was in active operation in June, 1837. This peculiar form of punishment has a venerable history, and was known before the Conquest, in the form of an instrument of torture called the stretchneck. The pillory was usually dedicated to fraudulent dealers, sellers of sham gold rings, or counterfeiters of papal bulls, until Star chamber tyrants made it a political weapon, whereby many a noble heart was tried and tempered.

GATHER PEYOTE BEANS FOR RITES

Indians Go to Mexico Under U. S. License for Drug Used in Ceremonials.

Eagle Pass, Tex.—Armed with permits from the federal government a party of Comanche Indians of Anadarko, Okla., arrived here several days ago on their way to Muzquiz, Mexico, to gather a supply of peyote beans to use for religious and sacramental purposes by their tribe. Formerly these and other blanket Indians of the United States made their annual pilgrimages to the vicinity of Laredo, Tex., where the species of cactus that produces the peyote bean grows in profusion.

From time immemorial this powerful drug has been used by the Indians in certain ceremonial rites. On these occasions the Indians would also take back with them a bountiful supply of the fiery mescal liquor. They are now not only prohibited from drinking mescal, but their use of the peyote beans is restricted to religious observances. It was discovered several years ago that the promiscuous use of the peyote drug was causing crime and insanity among the Indians.

Mescal, one of the most powerful intoxicating liquors known, is obtained from the mescal maguey plant, which is indigenous to nearly all of northern and central Mexico and the lower border region of Texas. It grows wild and is very abundant.

Plants Are Related.

The peyote bean, or button, is not produced by the same plant from which mescal is made, but is closely related to it. The effect of the bean however, is entirely different from that produced by the liquor made from the maguey. While the latter causes the person partaking of it to become insanely violent, the former produces a benign and delightful effect.

The use of the peyote bean is generally coupled with religious ceremonies. It causes one to act as though he were under the influence of some powerful hypnotist. The immediate effect is to stimulate the moral faculties, warming the heart, creating in the user feelings of benevolence and energizing the religious sentiment. The effect upon the mind is to create an apparent harmony in the world, very different from the actuality, to stimulate sensations of various kinds and especially those of color, and to produce a state of exaltation. It is asserted that the use of the peyote bean weakens the will power to a marked degree, so that it is difficult after one or two debauches to break away from it. The bean is used in two ways. It is masticated and swallowed or drunk as a liquid after soaking in water.

While the liquid made from the maguey is in general use among the lower class of Mexicans, the peyote bean was until the last few years more generally used by the Indians of the United States. In former years it was the Indian's substitute for opium. Its effect is similar to that of opium, and scientists pronounce its use as bad. The moral and mental effect of the peyote habit is especially harmful for young men who are permitted to use the bean, and it is said to have been the direct cause of many youthful marriages.

Agent Describes Rite.

Explaining the religious rite accompanying the eating of the peyote bean at an Indian reservation in South Dakota, a government agent who witnessed the ceremony said:

"The rite is usually indoors, but sometimes they have open air meetings. The priest or leader of the mescal ritual notifies an Indian to prepare for the next meeting. The host thus appointed, whether a peyote addict or not, spends his money, runs into debt, or by any means possible prepares a feast consisting of meats, prunes, rice and candy, not daring to decline, because the demand is made in the name of religion.

"On the appointed day the people gather at this man's place. The priest and the chorister take up their stations, and the worshipers with bare hands and feet, file in, and the ceremony starts early in the evening. The worshipers sit with bare feet planted squarely on their rugs, heads bowed and hands clasped before them in an attitude of prayer.

"A huge kettle is placed upon a stove, and in it is poured a package of the beans and a liberal supply of water, in which they are stewed until soft, the tea, or extract, being poured off and the water replenished from time to time. This tea and the cooked beans are passed around, and all present partake of both at their pleasure, or according to their respective capacities, throughout the night. At the end of a seance a wine jar is passed to all present, each person dipping both hands in the water and going through the motions of bathing from head to foot. As soon as the bathing is finished all adjourn for the feast. This ends the service, but there is nothing in the ritual to prevent those present from devouring everything eatable about the premises before taking their departure."

Because of the widespread use of the bean by the Indians, and its harmful effect, investigations under the direction of G. Valentine of the United States Indian bureau were made several years ago at every Indian reservation. Mr. Valentine called to his assistance scientists from the Smithsonian institution and the Department of Agriculture, and all of these men agreed that the use of the bean is a drug habit.

American Tests Bean.

An interesting and unusual experiment was made about fourteen years ago by Charles E. Shell, superintendent of the Truxton Canyon school in Arizona. In order to make a thorough test of the bean he tried it on himself. He told a strange and weird story of his visions while under the influence of the bean. He made notes of the effects immediately upon recovery. He said:

"I took ten large beans and steeped them in a pint of tepid water for 24 hours. I then pressed the water from them, which was now the color of sweet cider. The experiment began about two o'clock in the afternoon, and I drank the whole concoction at 15-minute intervals. About three o'clock the drug began to work. My thoughts ascended to heaven, as it were, and it appeared to me as though there was no evil in the world—all was good and pure.

"A peculiar characteristic of my condition was that I seemed to be under the influence of a hypnotist. I felt I was compelled to walk, whether I wanted to or not. I arose and walked a hundred yards or so, and then felt as though some force impelled me to return, but by another route.

"When I had nearly returned to the house I found myself stopped. This seemed to continue for a while, and usually the physician, who was watching me all the time, called for me to come into the house. I could not obey at once because the imaginary hypnotist would not permit me to return. This inclination to walk and stop returned several times afterward during the course of the experiment.

"About this time all the flowers in the garden seemed to become dazzlingly beautiful. Some of them along the way, ordinarily purple, seemed an intense, dazzling purple. The red birds, sitting on the fence, became magnificently beautiful splotches of red. Every sound was intensified. Modest colors, such as gray, ecru and terra cotta, and the color of the road, remained the same. Only the more pronounced colors became intensified. The clouds assumed visible shapes; some looked like human beings, while others seemed the shape of dragons, fishes, and so on.

"I was afterward told by an attendant that he never saw the clouds look more unattractive. When I closed my eyes a procession of Chinese pagodas, with beautifully colored trimmings, blazing geometrical designs and peacocks of brilliant plumage seemed to float in endless procession before me. The peculiar feature of this part of my trance was that all these scenes were statuesque; that is, there was no life; the peacocks seemed to be merely statues.

"A peculiar feature is that except the nauseating experience of drinking the liquid there is nothing unpleasant about the whole thing. The sensation, while under the influence of the drug, is a delight and for the time being the millennium has come. Recovery does not leave one with a headache or any unpleasant feeling, but it seems as though one had ascended above the earth, and he returns not with a dull thud, like dropping a sandbag, but as though floating down in a parachute."

Matters Before The Surrogate

In Surrogate's court in the matter of the judicial settlement of the accounts of Mary McEntee as executrix of the estate of Joseph McEntee of New Paltz, accounts filed and approved and decree ordered, discharging the executrix. John N. Vanderlyn attorney for the executrix.

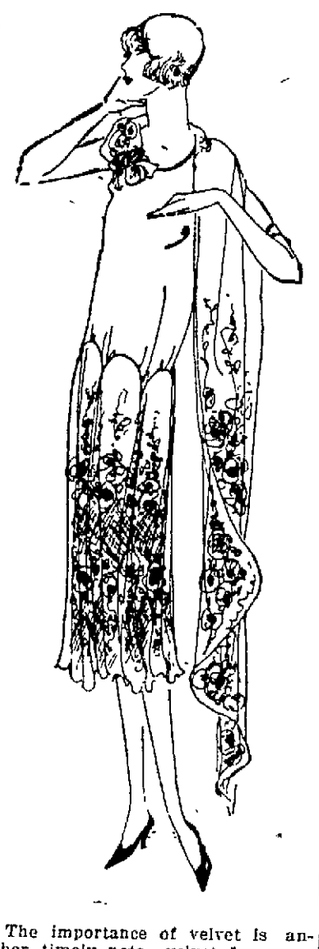
SOME FADS THOROUGHLY APPROVED.

(By Eleanor Gunn).

Some of the highlights of fashion during the past week have been significant enough to emphasize. For instance, women, when formally attired have reverted to white gloves. Those which match one's furs, or hose are liked for less formal dress, but white gloves must be listed among the preferences.

Then there is the growing tendency toward suede footwear for street wear, especially in tan colorings, and the persistence of light hosiery, toning several shades—perhaps in deference to darker days, but light, for all that.



The importance of velvet is another timely note—velvet for evening, velvet for the street ensemble, and velvet for the roman striped or plaid frock which, for want of a better name is dubbed a sports dress, though it may lead no more sportive existence than being worn for the day's routine.

The dance frock which flares also registers; together with the dance frock which has a scarf—attached or detached—and the one which has a matching cape, shawl, or coat.

Next there is the repeated use of red; the contrast in fur and fabric; the omnipresent felt hat—turned up not down, and often unbound; the touch of gold which appears here, there and everywhere; the prevailing fashion of wearing the skirts extremely short; and the growing custom of having not a chip but a flower on one's shoulder.

Lawyer's Clients Defined

A group of lawyers was conversing on divorce subjects recently in one of the corridors of the courthouse. They were joined by a young member of the profession who was bitterly denouncing the stupidity of his client who had just been cross-examined on the witness stand, and had become hopelessly confused by the opposition.

"Why, the darn fool," the young man began, but was stopped by Henry Spaan, one of the attorneys in the group, who said:

"Young man, did you ever stop to think that were it not for the darn fools, we lawyers would be without means of support?"—Indianapolis News.

Stone Bruises Have Value

Stone bruises on the feet are a sure cure for nervous disorders, in the opinion of a German specialist, who sets many of his patients to walking in their bare feet over stony fields. The more tender the patients' feet the quicker will be the cure, in the opinion of this expert on nervous disorders.

He holds that many nervous persons are unable to take their minds off troubles which they brood over constantly and has found over a long term of years that it is not possible for many patients to worry about other troubles if they have bruised and swollen feet.

Widow of Fourth Baron Decies Living in Poverty

London.—Lady Maria Gertrude Decies, widow of the fourth baron Decies and sister-in-law of the present baron, who married Helen Vivien Gould, is said to be living in poverty, making an insufficient livelihood by keeping a small village store near East Grinstead. She is quoted as saying she has not a penny except what she makes in her shop, and that she is sometimes hungry owing to the smallness of her income. She declares she lost all her money in helping another, and that she would be grateful to anyone providing her with remunerative employment.

Miles of Tunnels in Mines

In the working of the great gold mines in South Africa during the 41 years since their discovery there have been driven, it is announced, more than 4,000 miles of underground tunnels; more than enough to make a subway entirely across the United States. Additional tunnels are being added at the rate of more than 13 miles a month, all in the search for masses of gold ore from which the precious metal can be extracted profitably.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"Her Love Story" is the title of Gloria Swanson's latest Paramount picture, an Allan Dwan production, which begins a three day's showing tonight at the Keeney Theater. The story is an adaptation of Mary Roberts Rhinehart's novel, "Her Majesty the Queen." The supporting cast includes Ian Keith, George Fawcett, Sidney Herbert, Echlin Gayer and Mario Majeroni. Added features on the same program will be "Out of the Inkwell," a cartoon comic, topics of the day and a Mermaid comedy.

At the Auditorium tonight, "A Woman of Paris" with Edna Purviance, written and directed by Charles Chaplin. A drama of fate which pictures in sharp, stirring realism how the little things of everyday life among everyday people bring tragedy to some, joy and great happiness to others.

Corse Payton and his stock company is returning to the Orpheum Theater for a three days engagement, commencing today in a comedy success, "Three Rooms and Bath." This is one of Mr. Payton's greatest comedies. New Telephone Discovery

Vienna.—To get a telephone connection in Vienna takes so much time that the whole city is complaining. The telephone administration seeks to remedy the situation by establishing special services.

There is a "rapid" rate which costs nine times the normal and also a "lightning" rate, which must be paid for at thirty times the normal charge.

Rat Attacks Baby

St Louis—The crying of her baby awakened Mrs Alfred Ellis of this city and she discovered the child had been bitten nine times on the arms neck and face by a rat. The father hastily carried the baby to the home of a doctor a block away and had it treated.

CROWD ENJOYS PLAY.

How Sally Got a Husband" At First Presbyterian Church.

A capacity crowd enjoyed the esentation of the Y. W. C. A. prize y, "How Sally Got a Husband," the First Presbyterian Church ednesday evening. The play was itten by Miss Nan Rodie who also k the leading role. The play is er, full of real humor, and holds e interest. The parts were all y well played. The cast was as follows:

Sally	Nan Rodie
Becky	Gladys Hopper
Mrs. Moore	Eva Shook
Jim	Florence Tappen
Alex	Willa Van Vliet

Other numbers on the program included a piano duet by Mrs. Cady and Miss Ruth Dana which was much appreciated; an amusing recitation, "A Big Mistake," by little Miss Maud Hopper, and a solo, "The Holiday," by Miss Jessie Cowley. The numbers were heartily applauded and encored.

Ice cream was served following the entertainment by the young women of the Westminister Guild.

Police Lose Smokes

St. Louis.—Orders have been issued by Chief of Police O'Brien and Chief of Detectives Hoagland prohibiting men from smoking while on duty at police headquarters or at police stations. Citizens had made complaint against having to talk to officers while they were smoking.

For Buffalo Bill Monument

There is a flat concrete slab over the unpretentious grave of Colonel Cody—Buffalo Bill—on top of Lookout mountain, Colorado. This in turn is covered with ordinary chicken wire, and on the concrete are hundreds of coins, cents, nickels, dimes and even larger ones, which the visitors have thrown there. The chicken wire is to prevent anybody from getting the money with a stick The object of the collection is to build a real monument over the last resting place of Buffalo Bill.

Origin of Coat of Arms

Coats of arms originated from the insignia formerly embroidered on cloth and worn by the ancient knights over their armor to make them conspicuous in battle. Those having coats of arms nowadays have them by inheritance, which can sometimes be traced through Herald's college, London, England, which institution sometimes grants coats of arms to modern persons who can show they have means to maintain the dignity of such a bestowal.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 6.—The stock market encountered more resistance in the forward movement of prices today. The higher levels established by many of the active market leaders invited profit taking on a large scale while renewal of short selling was also undertaken in some sections of the speculative list.

Before this selling appeared, however, railroad stocks were leading another brisk advance in prices to the highest levels for the movement, and with the best records made by the low priced rails in which dividend action is expected. St. Louis San Francisco was the leader in this group, its advance to 40 setting a new high record for all time.

American Can was the best stronghold of the bulls, holding its ground above 140, while United States Steel, Cast Iron Pipe and other industrial stocks sold down fractionally from the opening. Rumors today placed American Can for a stock dividend and the splitting up of the stock on a four to one basis, with a dividend of $3 a share on the new stock. Encouragement was given to this view by the action of American Radiator directors in declaring a 50 per cent stock dividend.

Irregularity in price movements was first seen in the motor stocks, followed by the independent steels. Price cutting in popular cars, initiated today by Willys-Overland, which reduced prices of sedans $110, was the reason for heavy selling of motor stocks. Chandler lost 3½ points at 28 and made a new low for 1924; Willy-Overland Preferred lost 1 at 64⅜; Studebaker down 1 point.

Declines of a point or more were also made by American Sugar, American Woolen and other popular industrial stocks. Oils received little attention.

That evening she and her husband were agreeably surprised when a party of sixteen friends headed by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Herd drove up to the farm. They, of course, were made welcome, and the first word Mr. Herd said to Mrs. Wright as he entered the house was: "Where are those pumpkin pies." The evening was delightfully spent with playing cards, dancing and music, and refreshments were served, including the pies and doughnuts. Mr. and Mrs. Wright were extended the best wishes of those present and the hope was expressed that the Wright pumpkin crop would be bountiful next year, and that Mrs. Wright would be as successful in her baking of that famous delicacy. At an early hour Wednesday morning the guests departed for their homes.

Have You This Habit?

OBSERVING

ANNE WHITE, Mrs. George White, came with her husband a bank clerk in three times to live in a city from which commuting betwee of New York. We are in a hurry to [illegible] while Anne White found and explained to her the first at least five new [illegible] and three new [illegible] shopping.

"Oh, George and I when we came here to live made up our minds that the subject of interest to observe and be interested."

Two years after the George Whites move [illegible] had been advanced, at the bank, and the new position meant earlier and later hours than earning hours allowed. But their habit of "observing and being interested" continued. When Anne took a New Yorker walking and showed her something new in her own park, the explanation would be, "George and I like to tramp for an hour or so after early supper and we're always discovering something."

They lived down on a little old-fashioned square in the slums that they had also "discovered." On one corner was a market where delicious country eggs could be bought for less than one paid for cold storage eggs up town; a block away was a Russian church with music that most people had to go to a concert hall to hear; across the street was a house in which a member of Washington's cabinet had once lived. Every once in a while the Whites [illegible] on expeditions. One evening [illegible] across the street, [illegible] to eat on a walking [illegible] they got on a ferry [illegible] than the papers [illegible] and acquired a new [illegible]. They came to know, [illegible] that [illegible] and the boat lines [illegible] passed. They had [illegible] to be interested in" the water front. Anne knew the finest hat of Sixteen in the city; George was always [illegible] of some new acquisition [illegible] or the museum, or of some new picture exhibit. They went to parades and experiment theaters [illegible] maybe, see the town agog.

Then the bankers one day made George head of their branch in China. It was a very big jump for so young a man. When some one commented on the appointment to the president, he replied that the post called for a man with powers of observation and sustained interest. Young George White, he said, knew more about a job after a month than most people did in a lifetime. "The Whites' habit of "observing and being interested" in what was near at hand [illegible] brought to them the ends of the earth.

COLLEGIATE GAMES HERE IF WELL PATRONIZED

Manager of St. Stephen's Will Use Kingston Field If Supported.

The managers of the St. Stephen's and K. H. S. football teams are preparing for the largest crowd which has ever witnessed a football game within the Colonial city's limits. Manager Woodruff of the St. Stephen's football team while addressing a group of high school students Wednesday afternoon stated that if this Manhattan game proves a success financially the St. Stephen's football team will use the Kingston fair grounds as its home field in the future This will mean that in the years to come the local fans will see such teams as represent Union College, Rutgers College, Trinity College, etc., playing here. If the citizens of Kingston will cooperate with their high school by buying tickets and attending this game they can make their city a center of collegiate football contests in the future.

Morgenweckers Win Another

Benny Borgman's Stars Lost to Kingston Quintet at Armory Wednesday, Score 37 to 18, in Uninteresting Contest—M. Husta Led in Scoring Fields.

Benny Borgman's Stars proved otherwise at the armory court Wednesday in a listless contest. The visiting players after a few minutes of playing, if they were tired, which was not altogether improbable, were greatly helped by Referee Davey, who proceeded to call fouls and continued to do so until closing time. The final score was in favor of the Morgenweck outfit, 37 to 18.

Davey called a total of 48 fouls during the struggle, which left but little time for basketball. TOMMY GIBBONS IS MAKING BIG MONEY

Takes in $125,000 Since Fight With Dempsey.

Pugilistic prestige and big purses are coming to Tommy Gibbons at a time when the St. Paul heavyweight is long past the age when most fighters are in their prime.

Fighting gamely up the long, hard hill to ring fame, Gibbons achieved a formidable summit when he stayed fifteen gruelling rounds with Jack Dempsey in Montana a year ago. That "moral victory," after nearly seventeen years of ring experience, opened the way to the largest purses the St. Paul fighter has ever received.

There was no direct remuneration for Gibbons in his fight with Dempsey, but, now, at the age of thirty-three, he is "cashing in" on the showing he made and is apparently at the zenith of his ring career.

For his fight with Georges Carpentier at Michigan City last May he received his largest purse, $62,000. Previously his top had been $12,500 for a match with Harry Greb. He received $50,000 for his fight with Jack Bloomfield, the English heavyweight, in London.

There is none of the barroom fighter in Tommy's makeup. He has carried the gentlemanly bearing of his private life into the ring, and finds in his home life his greatest delight. Most of his time, aside from fight engagements, is devoted to his wife and five children, all boys.

Tommy is modest and very little in the limelight that would gladly welcome him, even in his home town. Back in the days when Brother Mike's ring prowess gained him the name of "Phantom," Tommy saw the opportunities for a much more remunerative occupation than as an employee in the railroad shops

"Clean living and right thinking," Tommy once said, "can do more to keep a fellow in condition than the hardest training interrupted by occasional lapses into dissipation."

In recent years Tommy has established an enviable ring record, including a long list of knockouts. Even after his fifteen-round contest with Champion Dempsey there still stood his record of never having been knocked down in a ring engagement At one time, starting in 1921, he ran his string of consecutive knockouts to twenty.

There has been no talk from Tommy of retiring from the ring. He wants another match with Dempsey and expects to keep after it until he lands it.

When retirement comes, unless he suffers unforeseen business reverses before then, Tommy probably will be able to retire to a life of comparative ease, for he has made income-yielding investments with his winnings.

College Grid Game Saturday

St. Stephen-Manhattan College Contest at Fair Grounds Saturday Expected to Draw Large Crowd—K. H. S. in Preliminary Game.

Captain Noble and his fighting warriors from St. Stephen's will invade Kingston Saturday afternoon and will play the first college football game ever staged in this city when they meet Manhattan College from New York. The game will be played at the fair grounds at 3 o'clock, following a preliminary contest between St. Stephen's seconds and the Kingston High School.

Coach Kenneth A. Bray of St. Stephen's, has been in Kingston to look over the territory and upon his return to the college announced that he would endeavor to play at least two games in the city next season, if support at the first game this week should warrant it. The management of football at the college has not been satisfied with treatment received in Poughkeepsie and believes that Kingston will make a better place for home games than Poughkeepsie.

The entire student body from St. Stephen's, numbering about 125 men, is expected to be in attendance at the games. Cheering practice is being held at Annandale this week and "Luke" Andrews, cheer leader at the college, will be in Kingston this week to train the high school students in St. Stephen's cheers and songs in order that the Kingstonians may join the cheering squads from St. Stephen's against the Manhattan aggregation.

The Kingston High School officials have promised the use of the high school band to the Stephenites during the contest with Manhattan.

The varsity from St. Stephen's will be in the best of shape by Saturday. Because there was no game on Saturday of last week, the injured men on the squad were afforded an opportunity to convalesce and should be in prime condition when they meet the Manhattaners on Saturday. Deloris, Wilson, Jones and others who have been out of games this season because of injuries, are all expected to be in the line-up against the New York team.

The second team at St. Stephen's has been undefeated this season and the players are prepared to come to Kingston Saturday to stack themselves against the Kingston High School squad.

Michigan Better Than Its Record

Yost Claims University of Michigan Eleven Is Much Better Than Its Record Indicates—Team of Opportunists Claims Coach.

By Davis J. Walsh.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 6.—No doubt based on the theory that a gold nugget sometimes bears a vague resemblance to a coffee bean, the University of Michigan wishes to proclaim the fact that it has the second best team in the Western Conference, the official big ten standings to the contrary.

Some of its followers go even further than that. They think they have the second best team in the middle-west, the Illini perforce being rated at the top. It might be mentioned that they are duly aware that Notre Dame is represented by a football team this fall, although seemingly the average conference community would be pleased to forget it.

Fielding H. Yost, of course, is not a party to these immoderate claims but he does think his eleven is vastly better than its record indicates and quotes the following to prove it.

"Michigan got four first downs against Minnesota and won, 13 to 0; Michigan got seven first downs against Illinois' fourteen and scored two touchdowns against the Illini six; Michigan was outscored in first downs by both the Michigan Aggies and Wisconsin but won by respective scores of 7 to 0 and 21 to 0.

"We are opportunists" said Yost. "Give Michigan the ball inside midfield and apparently it will score two times out of four. Even with their great attacks, neither Illinois nor Notre Dame can show as high an average. We simply have a better team than our 39 to 14 defeat by Illinois indicates."

In brief the gold nugget has been mistaken for a coffee bean by those with only long range information on the subject.

The Wolverine has no great ball runner like Grange nor an all star backfield such as Notre Dame can muster but it is playing the old Harvard system, the strike once and strike hard idea, right into the ground. Michigan is a team of opportunists.

Throw out the Illinois disaster and the writer would be willing to concede Michigan's omnipotence. But it would be equally logical to say that if you throw out the Dempsey fight, Willard would still be champion.

Jack Dempsey's Party.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 6.—Tex Rickard and Luis Angel Firpo will be guests of Jack Dempsey tonight at a dinner the world's champion will give newspapermen at a local restaurant. It is expected that Dempsey, Rickard and Firpo will speak, the latters remarks to be passed on to the guests through an interpreter.
